EXPECT GRAND JURIES TO ACT

District Attorneys Also to Get Copies of Evidence

COMMITTEE COUNSEL SUM UP

CALLED TRAITORS TO NATION

Expulsion from Assembly Demanded—Destruction of Government Declared Their Aim.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 12.—Treason to State and nation is charged against the five suspended Socialist Assemblymen, their prosecution by State and Federal authorities recommended, and the Socialist Party declared an outlaw in a brief summing up the evidence presented against them at the investigation now in progress before the Assembly Judiciary Committee.

The brief, submitted ostensibly for the "guidance" of the defense, is signed by Attorney General Newton, but was prepared by ex-Senator Elon R. Brown of counsel for the committee. It was filed with the committee today, and copies were sent to each member of the Assembly.

The office of the Attorney General was closed today, but it was learned on unquestionable authority that verified copies of the testimony will before many hours be in the hands of the District Attorneys of New York, Bronx and Kings Counties for presentation to their respective Grand Juries, and will be sent as well to the United States District Attorneys for the Southern and Eastern Districts of New York for use in proceedings before Federal Grand Juries.

"These men are denied the right to seats in the Assembly," the brief states, "because they seek to destroy the government of the State and nation and are traitors to both. The inherent power of sovereign legislative and parliamentary bodies to exclude or expel members for cause is universally recognized.

"A decent regard for the Assembly as the popular representative house of the State requires that these five Assemblymen be excluded from their seats. They have taken a false oath to secure seats which they cannot occupy as gentlemen, patriots, loyal citizens or Assemblymen. They come here under the false pretense of being loyal to their Government, when in fact they are really citizens of the Internationale, and desire above all things the destruction of this Government."

According to counsel for the Judiciary Committee the Gitlow case, which ended yesterday with the imposition of a sentence of from five to ten years on the defendant, ex-Socialist Assemblyman Benjamin Gitlow, presents a parallel. Gitlow sat with three of the five suspended Socialists in the 1918 Assembly when there were ten Socialist members of the lower house.

According to some of the committee, the beginning of criminal proceedings against the Socialist Assemblymen should automatically put an end to the proceedings before the committee. Thus the Socialists would lose the opportunity they have counted on of getting the aims and principles of their party on record.

Points in the Brief.

These points are set forth in the brief:

1. The five Assemblymen, by pledging themselves as members of the Socialist Party, not to "vote to appropriate moneys for military or naval purposes or war," disqualified themselves from taking the constitutional oath of office as Assemblymen, and the oath as taken by them was false.

2. The five Assemblymen, by their promise to take directions from the dues paying members of their "locals" or their "Executive" Committee in all matters arising in the Assembly, including their vote for all appointees and officials chosen by the Legislature; to vote as a unit with the other members of their party on all occasions, and to place their resignations in the hands of the dues paying members to insure the performance of their pledge, abdicated their functions as Assemblymen and disqualified themselves from taking the oath of office and rendered their oath false.

3. The Socialist Party is a revolutionary party, having the single purpose of destroying our institutions and Government, which they abhor, and substituting the Russian Soviet Government or the proletariat Government instead, to be controlled by themselves. This appears from their platforms and propaganda.

4. The Socialist Party is not a national party, like the Democratic Party or the Republican Party, whose aim is to conserve and preserve the nation. The Socialist Party is an anti-national party, whose allegiance is given to the Internationale and not to the United States, whose Government and institutions it would destroy.

5. "Mass action" and the "general strike" are advocated and urged by the Public Officials Derelict in Duty, Says LaGuardia, If Socialists Were Disloyal in War, as Charged

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 12.—A charge that the five suspended Socialist Assemblymen were guilty of treason, made by Assemblyman Ransom H. Gillett of Columbia County, at a luncheon this afternoon for Republican women of Albany and its vicinity by the Albany County Republican Committee, brought a quick retort from F. H. LaGuardia, President of the New York Board of Aldermen, one of the other speakers.

"If the five suspended Socialists are guilty of the charges made against them they should be indicted, convicted, and shot," said Major LaGuardia. "If not, they should be immediately reseated. There is no question of law, as I see it, simply a question of facts. There should be no whitewashing if any initial mistake has been made."

"If they were disloyal during the war, as is charged, some public official must have been derelict in his duty," he continued. "If they had committed no act or crime, then it seems as if somebody has lost his head. If somebody has lost his head and these charges cannot be sustained, then whoever is responsible has been giving the Socialist Party more advertising in the last six weeks than Lenin and Trotzky could have given them in two years."

He ridiculed fear that the Government was in danger of being overthrown by Bolsheviki. He contended that the proper way to combat Bolshevism was not through speakers or by oppression, but by the good conduct of men in public office and efficient and intelligent administration.

Mr. LaGuardia was also one of the principal speakers at the dinner of the Albany County Republican organization tonight. He urged the need of unity between up-State and New York City Republicans. "If we present to the people of the country a constructive, progressive platform backed by a man in whom the people will have the confidence to intrust the carrying out of the platform we will win overwhelmingly."

He expressed the belief that the repeal of the primary law would be a step backward and that the people resent going back to the old convention system.

1,000 POLICEMEN JOIN FIGHT ON SNOW

HYLAN WORKS TEN MINUTES

Surface Lines Make Progress—Garbage Becoming a Menace—Schoolboys at Work.

One thousand patrolmen exchanged their clubs for pickaxes yesterday and went to work with a will clearing the snow and ice from the roadways of the Brooklyn, Manhattan, and Williamsburg bridges. All the policemen were volunteers who responded to the call of the city for able-bodied men in city departments to assist in the emergency.

The patrolmen began work at 5 o'clock on the approaches to the bridges and made excellent headway in a few hours. In less than two hours the 200 men at the Manhattan Bridge broke up so much ice that a traffic snarl which had tied up scores of auto trucks and horse-drawn vehicles was untangled. The work there was in charge of Captain Edward J. Burke of the Elizabeth Street Station. Residents and shopkeepers in Canal Street in the vicinity of the bridge cheered the volunteer patrolmen, who kept on digging ice and smiling.

Six hundred patrolmen were assigned to Delancey Street and the Williamsburg Bridge, and 200 to Brooklyn Bridge. Captain Toole was in charge at Brooklyn Bridge. The men worked under Sergeants, who also lent a hand to the pickwielding. Many of the patrolmen volunteered to devote their nights off to the work. Other volunteers were supposed to be on patrol duty from 4 P. M. to midnight, but were relieved when they offered to go into the ice fields. The men will receive no extra pay for the work. The frame of mind of one patrolman when asked whether he was paid for his services, was said to be typical of all the others.

"No, we don't get any extra pay," he said. "We get paid in what we call Police Department honor. If the people appreciate what we are doing we will be happy. But don't forget that the policemen feel they deserve better pay for their own work."

The police closed traffic for three quarters of an hour yesterday on Williamsburg Bridge, the thoroughfare usually travelled by Mayor Hylan going to City Hall. Through misinterpretation of the order, the bridge was closed tight, the roadways, elevated lines, surface lines and foot walks, and great confusion resulted when pedestrians, trucks and trains were held up at the approaches. When the error was discovered trains, pedestrians and vehicles were permitted to proceed, but the north roadway was kept closed and work was begun removing the ice that had clogged it.

The snow diggers succeeded yesterday in making a fairly clear road from the City Hall to and over Williamsburg Bridge along Park Row and Delancey Street, the route the Mayor's car travels.

Mayor Hylan, on the way home last night, stopped at Williamsburg Bridge, descended from his limousine and wielded a pick and shovel for a few minutes. A crowd gathered, and he was cheered by the people. The Mayor smiled and remarked that the work was strenuous. He will leave today for a two weeks' vacation in Palm Beach.

Mayor Hylan spent several hours yesterday morning in a tour of the city streets, and then conferred on the situ-

IRISH DEMONSTRATE IN HEART OF LONDON

Ten Thousand, Carrying Sinn Fein Flags, Meet at Albert Hall, Demanding Freedom.

SINN FEINERS LEAVE JAIL

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—An enthusiastic audience, carrying Sinn Fein flags, filled the Royal Albert Hall in London last night on the occasion of a demonstration in favor of self-determination for Ireland.

A strong military picket was stationed at the entrances to prevent the attendance of soldiers in uniform.

Prominent on the platform was Mrs. Despard, sister of Lord French, the Irish Viceroy. While Chairman A. O'Brien was speaking in support of an Irish republic mention of the word England was the signal for an outburst of booing. Several people were ejected for interrupting the proceedings.

A message from the Scottish National Committee, speaking of the day when English control of Scotland and Ireland would cease to be, and signed by Robert Smillie, was loudly applauded, as were sanguine references to the Irish National Loan, appeals for subscriptions to which were distributed in the hall by thousands. Arthur Griffiths, "Vice President of the Irish Republic," who was the chief speaker, was freely interrupted and several persons were driven from the hall after something approaching a free fight. There were 50,000 applications for seats, but only some 10,000 could be accommodated.

The new Irish Home Rule bill will probably be introduced into Parliament next week, according to an announcement by Premier Lloyd George in the House of Commons today.

DUBLIN, Feb. 12.—Nine Sinn Feiners arrested in November last during a raid on the offices of the Sinn Fein "Parliament," were released from the Bridewell prison today. They included John O'Mahony, John Hayes, and Frank Lawless, Sinn Fein members of the British House of Commons.

O'Mahony, speaking on behalf of himself and the other prisoners at the trial, which resulted in the Sinn Feiners being sentenced to two months' imprisonment, claimed that the court had no legitimate jurisdiction.

The King's Bench Division Court here today refused to grant an order for the release of the Lord Mayor-elect of Dublin, Alderman Tom Kelly, who is in Wormwood Scrubbs Prison. The refusal was on the ground that Alderman Kelly was out of the jurisdiction of the court.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—Ian Macpherson, the Secretary for Ireland, was asked in the House of Commons today why Alderman Tom Kelly, Lord Mayor-elect of Dublin, had been sent to prison. Mr. Macpherson replied that Kelly had been arrested and deported under the Defense of the Realm regulations because he had been suspected of having acted in a manner prejudicial to the public interests.

DUBLIN, Feb. 12.—Robert Barton, Sinn Fein member of the House of Commons, who was arrested last March,

Arizona Ratifies Suffrage Amendment, Is the 31st State, Only 5 More Needed

PHOENIX, Ariz., Feb. 12.—Ratification of the Woman Suffrage amendment to the Federal Constitution by a special session of the Legislature, was completed tonight when the Senate adopted the ratifying resolution, following action by the House this afternoon.

Both branches made it unanimous.

Arizona is the thirty-first State to ratify the amendment. Only five more States are required to ratify to make the Nineteenth Amendment to the Constitution effective.

RICHMOND, Va., Feb. 12.—Woman suffrage was defeated today when the House of Delegates adopted, 62 to 22, the Leedy resolution rejecting the Federal amendment to the Federal Constitution. The Senate, by a vote of 24 to 10, had previously adopted the resolution.

SUFFRAGISTS SPLIT BY PARTY POLITICS

Mrs. Bass Attacks Republican Women Who Spread Propaganda at Convention.

MAY BREAK OUT ON FLOOR

Mrs. Catt Predicts Speedy Success of Amendment on Eve of Chicago Session.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—Party politics overshadowed all other issues on the eve of the fifty-first convention of the National American Woman Suffrage Association. Party lines were being so tightly drawn tonight that the most skillful leadership will be necessary to hold the gathering to a strictly non-partisan course.

The powder was touched off by the Democratic women, who promise to liven several issues that will come up on the floor. Mrs. George Bass, member of the Democratic Executive Committee, and referred to as the "spokeswoman for the Administration," issued a statement sharply criticising the Illinois Republican Women's Executive Committee for placing a full-page paid advertisement in the program of the convention.

Mrs. Bass's remarks were chiefly directed against the first sentence printed in heavy type at the head of the advertisement, which read:

"To the Republican Party you owe the passage of the Federal suffrage amendment, and it will be responsible for the ratification soon to come."

"In regard to this advertisement I will say I was greatly shocked," said Mrs. Bass. "The Democratic Party in Congress and in the States has done more to give the women in the United States suffrage than any other party, and President Wilson is the only President who has lifted his voice and his influence in the cause of suffrage."

Earlier in the day Mrs. Bass had issued a reply to the statement made on Wednesday by Will H. Hays, Republican National Chairman, in which she declared the "mere act of giving women suffrage does not automatically give them all the privileges of party management."

"Some changes in party rules and election and primary laws are necessary to give women equal representation with men," she said.

Republican Women Stand Firm.

Mrs. Fletcher Dobyns, Chairman of the Illinois committee which inserted the advertisement, declared that the Republican women refused to be drawn into a controversy concerning it.

Miss Mary Garrett Hay of New York, speaking for the Republican Women's National Committee, said:

"The advertisement was not inserted by the national organization. It was paid for by the State organization. It seems to me it rather shows the alertness of the Illinois women and their progressiveness. I would call it something of a business coup."

That the matter probably will find its way to the convention floor was intimated by one of the Republican delegates, who said such a matter "could best be handled by the convention itself by resolution."

Another question in which party lines may crop out is that of the merger of the suffrage association with the National League of Women Voters, the first congress of which will be held on Saturday. The Democrats look upon it as a superfluous organization. The Republican women speak of it tolerantly as a sort of innocuous organization, probably helpful, if anything, to the Republican Party. The "neutrals," those who are waiting final ratification of the suffrage amendment before declaring party allegiance, declare that the league will serve both as a school of citizenship for women and as a nonpartisan lobbying organization to support the enactment of laws in which both Democratic and Republican women are interested.

But while politics hummed up and down the corridors of the Congress Hotel, it was strictly barred from the six preliminary conferences which were in session all day and ended tonight at half a dozen dinners, following which the most prominent speaker delivered addresses. Mrs. Catt, Miss Hay, and other prominent suffragists spent the entire day hurrying from one conference to another and back to the meeting of the Board of Directors of the association, which was in session all day behind closed doors.

Expects Quick Ratification.

CHICAGO, Feb. 12 (Associated Press).—At the formal opening of the National Woman Suffrage Convention tomorrow Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, President, will give her annual address. The victory convention, which ends fifty years' effort to procure votes for the women of America will close on Saturday evening with a ratification banquet. On Sunday memorial services will be held for Dr. Anna Howard Shaw.

Before the convention and Congress closes Mrs. Catt predicted several States would have ratified the suffrage amendment.

"Our headquarters will remain intact until the other six States are secured," said Mrs. Catt. "We expect Arizona, New Mexico, and Oklahoma to ratify before the convention closes, and Delaware, West Virginia, and Connecticut are our hope for the additional three States."

WILSON TO HEAR RAIL MEN TODAY

Representatives of 2,000,000 Seek Definite Assurance on Living Cost Reduction.

STRIKE PERIL LESSENS

Hines Tells the Shopmen That He Cannot Grant Their Demands at This Time.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—President Wilson will be asked in an interview tomorrow by spokesmen for the more than 2,000,000 railroad employes that definite assurances be given of an immediate reduction in the cost of living, leaders in the wage negotiations declared tonight. As an alternative, the union representatives will claim increased wages, demands for which were not pressed at Mr. Wilson's request last Summer.

Representatives of the workers, it was intimated tonight, base their hope for higher wages largely on the increase in the cost of living since the last general wage increase in 1918. The cost of living question, while always to the fore in the negotiations which the union men have had with Director General Hines, will be employed to the full extent of the unions' power in the conference with the President, it was indicated.

Immediately after the announcement from the White House that the President would see a union committee of three personally, a meeting of all union heads interested in the controversy was called and preparations were begun for possible presentation of verbal claims in amplification of the written statements submitted through Director General Hines.

Conference on White House Lawn.

The employes will be represented by B. M. Jewell, Acting President of the Railway Employes' Department, American Federation of Labor; E. J. Manion, President of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, and Timothy Shea, Acting President of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen. The conference will be held on the south lawn of the White House, where Mr. Wilson spends a portion of his mornings.

There was unmistakable evidence tonight among the union officials of a fear that the President would refuse to grant their wage demands. A few said frankly they could see no hope of a settlement favorable to them. The view seemed to have been based on the arguments offered in rebuttal by Mr. Hines as the union leaders presented new claims or proposals.

Director General Hines, in transmitting data on the controversy to President Wilson today, was understood to have made "suggestions" relative to a final disposition of the problems. These, however, did not take the form of definite recommendations, it was said. Union leaders had knowledge of what Mr. Hines's stand was and they were understood to fear the President's decision would follow closely along the same lines.

The Director General in his conference with the union heads told them that he could not grant their demands because of the early termination of Federal control and explained that pending legislation, passage of which was expected, would set up machinery which would provide "impartial and unbiased" handling of the wage claims. The union argument to this was that they were thus compelled to face another delay with no assurance of relief.

While the controversies with the other unions were quiescent because of a switch in the centre of interest from the Railroad Administration to the White House, Mr. Hines conferred with representatives of the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employes and Shop Laborers, who have called a strike of their 300,000 members Tuesday, officials of the Brotherhood of Railroad Station Employes and Chiefs of the Longshoremen's Union.

The conference with the maintenance of way workers resulted practically in placing their demands in the same category with those now before the President. Mr. Hines told the committee frankly that he would not agree to their demand for higher pay at this time, but informed them of his willingness to leave the case open pending decision of the President.

As Men Construe Agreement.

The maintenance employes' representatives presented a statement from their President, A. E. Barker, the contents of which were not divulged. J. P. Malloy, Vice President, who headed the delegation, however, declared the agreement which Railroad Administration officials claimed would be broken by the proposed strike, contained no provision with respect to wages, which required a notice of thirty days before cancellation. His construction of the agreement was that the thirty-day clause applied only to "hours of service and working conditions." On this basis, he contended, official notice was unnecessary.

Differences between the Railroad Administration and the station employes

ARTICLE X. CHANGE FAILS, NEW ONE MADE; POLL SHOWS ONLY 18 BITTER-ENDERS; ALLIES INSIST ON DEMAND FOR CULPRITS

President to Preside at the Next Cabinet Meeting; May Resume Full Control of Affairs Next Week

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—A report that President Wilson would make his appearance at the next Cabinet meeting, probably not later than Tuesday, was circulated in Washington today.

White House officials smiled when they were questioned and classified the report as a "good bet." Secretary Lansing also came pretty near to confirming the report. He said that it was his understanding that there would be no Cabinet meeting until one was called by the President, and that the President would be in his chair at the head of the table when the next meeting was held.

There is a good deal of speculation as to whether the President may not resume the full control of his office on Tuesday.

Some of those who pretend to be in possession of information of reasonably certain character were willing to make the flat prediction today that the President would occupy his seat at a Cabinet meeting within the next two weeks.

Added strength to the report that the President would be on hand at a Cabinet meeting soon was given by the announcement that he would receive in person tomorrow morning a committee of three representing the railroad workers who are demanding increased wages. This will be the first time the President has received such a delegation since he was taken ill on his tour of the West in the cause of the League of Nations.

The political leaders are convinced now that the President will take a more active part in the treaty situation from this time, and that he is sure to be a potent factor in the national campaign. There still remains the question whether he will, in any sense, appear as a candidate for a third term.

Secretary Tumulty merely smiled today when asked if he expected the President to preside at a Cabinet meeting soon. But he would not deny the report, and he seemed to be in high spirits.

FIRM TO GERMANY ON EXTRADITIONS

Allied Council Agrees on Stand—Another Note of Demand Is Expected Soon.

BERLIN BARS NEUTRAL TRIAL

Dutch Take Steps to Prevent the Entry of Any More German Refugees.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—The allied Supreme Council, after discussing today the situation arising from Germany's violent protest over the extradition demands, agreed on the question of insisting upon those demands, it was stated tonight.

It had been reported that there were differences between France and Great Britain as to whether the demands should be modified.

It is probable that the position of the Allies will be set forth soon in a statement. This may take the form of another communication to Germany, or possibly one to Holland. As far as can be ascertained, however, nothing definite has been decided regarding any further steps to be taken toward Holland.

The council, in dealing with other questions, decided that financial experts of the allied Governments, many of whom are here, should meet soon to discuss the problem of international exchange in an effort to devise a plan for its stabilization. It was not settled when the first meeting of these experts should be held.

It was finally decided by the council that its headquarters should remain in Paris. For the convenience of the British Governmental authorities it will continue to sit here for the present, probably through the coming fortnight.

It is expected that Premiers Lloyd George and Nitti will be in constant attendance. Premier Millerand will probably be called home before long, in which case France will be represented by Philippe Berthelot, political director of the Foreign Office, and Paul Cambon, Ambassador to Great Britain.

Although Marshal Foch and General Weygand arrived at 10 Downing Street just before the first session of the council today they did not attend either of the two meetings held. Belgium was represented by Premier Delacroix.

Germany Opposes Neutral Tribunal.

BERLIN, Feb. 12.—The German list of the accused persons demanded by the Entente will be published within a few days, it is announced.

The National Zeitung says that Germany will refuse to entertain the idea of a neutral tribunal for trying the accused, which has been suggested.

According to the Kreuz Zeitung, former Emperor William sent a telegram to the Dutch Government, emphatically refusing to give his consent to the surrender of the former Crown Prince, as the latter had proposed to the Entente.

German Foreign Office authorities have not yet received the note which is reported to have been forwarded by Premier Millerand, threatening Germany with an indefinite occupation of the Rhineland province because of the nonfulfillment of treaty obligations. On the contrary, it is stated that German negotiations with France concerning difficulties encountered in making coal deliveries have not been concluded.

Government officials allege that French radio messages have been sent to the Far East and other quarters disseminating reports with a view to creating sentiment in favor of the extradition of the Germans accused of war crimes, and saying that Germany is divided on the extradition issue.

COMMONS OPPOSES TREATY REVISION

Motion of a Labor Member Beaten, 254 to 60, After a Long Discussion.

FIXED INDEMNITY POSSIBLE

If Germany Offers Lump Sum Allies Are Not Likely to be Unreasonable, Bonar Law Says.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—Most of today's session of the House of Commons was occupied in a discussion of the motion of William James Thorne, Labor member for West Ham, in favor of a revision of the Peace Treaty, which he subjected to severe criticism.

The most interesting suggestion emanated from Lord Robert Cecil that the League of Nations should send two international commissions to Russia to ascertain the exact conditions and to fix the provisional boundaries of the border States.

Arthur J. Balfour, Lord President of the Council, who made a general defense of the treaty and the Government's share therein, said he feared Lord Robert's suggestion would not result in a new heaven on earth in Russia. He also denied that the Government was encouraging Poland in a policy of adventure.

The motion of William Thorne was rejected 254 to 60.

Replying to the statement of Ronald McNeill, Unionist, that Premier Lloyd George had presented a memorandum in behalf of the British and French Governments' proposition on the Adriatic settlement which would abrogate Montenegrin independence, Andrew Bonar Law, the Government leader, expressed his belief that a majority of the Montenegrins did not desire to restore the King of Montenegro, and that it was quite possible the Montenegrin people might prefer to become part of a larger nationality than continue independent.

In reply to suggestions that the German indemnity ought to be a fixed sum, Mr. Bonar Law said that if Germany proposed a lump sum it was not likely the Allies would be unreasonable.

QUESTION RUSSIAN POLICY.

Paris Papers Oppose Trade, but Say Unity Must Be Maintained.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 11.—The new orientation of British foreign policy, as outlined in the King's speech and by Premier Lloyd George, is measured with careful criticism in the French press today. The question of the British attitude toward and intentions in Russia is especially the subject of comment. No alternative policy is proposed, but the writers are agreed that at present it is impossible to trade with the Russian Co-operatives and not at the same time come to an agreement with the Soviet Government.

August Gauvin, editor of the Journal des Débats, writes:

"It is characteristic that Lloyd George should put into the King's speech the declaration that the re-establishment of peace and economic life in Russia and the Orient is indispensable to Europe. Such a declaration definitely engages the British Government.

"In his own speech, the Prime Minister developed this sensational idea. He has categorically repudiated any new help to the White forces in Russia. He believes in the possibility of saving Russia by commerce, and he does not believe in the danger of the Red Army to Western Europe. He goes further and forbids the neighboring States of Russia to engage in any offensive against the Soviet Government. Poland, which has, perhaps, other intentions,

NEW TANGLES ON TREATY

Only 29 Republicans for Mild Group Proposal On Article X.

DEMOCRATS DENOUNCE IT

UNDERWOOD SEEKS ACCORD

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Another effort to reach a compromise on Article X. of the Peace Treaty fell to the ground today when a poll of the Senate showed but twenty-nine Republicans willing to support the proposal which mild reservationists submitted yesterday, and leading Democratic Senators, including Senator Hitchcock, reiterated their statements that the proposed "mild" substitute was worse than the original Lodge reservation.

Six of the strong reservationists who have stood by the Lodge reservations declared unqualifiedly against the proposed change. They are Senators Wadsworth, Calder, Frelinghuysen, Dillingham, Ball and Sutherland. Their position was that the modification of the Lodge reservation converted a clear and definite statement into a vague one. They regarded it as an attempt to let Democratic Senators "save their faces," and said that they could lend no assistance to the Democrats in that regard.

And at the same time Senator Hitchcock and Senator Walsh of Montana, for the Democrats, denounced the proposed reservation as propaganda. They served notice on the Republicans that they must not expect the Democrats to support any change in the Lodge reservation on Article X. just so it is a change, merely for the sake of saving their faces.

The day was devoted by the leaders on both sides to "spying out the country" of the enemy. The adjournment of the Senate out of respect to Lincoln's memory afforded an opportunity for many conferences.

After discussing the situation with Democratic and Republican Senators, Senator Hitchcock said tonight:

"The fact is that the outcome now depends on the Republicans. I feel a good deal of disposition to leave it to them. They initiated this effort for ratification, and as they have the majority it is largely in their hands, anyhow.

"The proposed reservation to Article X. is nothing but propaganda. In my opinion it would be better for the Democrats to take the original Lodge reservation. I would rather vote for that than for the substitute now proposed. I never will vote for the original Lodge reservation, but would prefer it to this one.

"I do not know who is the author of the proposed substitute, but it seems to have no purpose except to help the case for the Lodge draft. There has been an attempt to make it appear as if something had been forced on Senator Lodge, but as a matter of fact it is worse than his original reservation."

Walsh Rejoins on Economic Clauses.

Senator Walsh of Montana, expressed a similar view. He said that the mild reservationists' proposal appeared to have been framed "on the assumption that any change in the form of the original Lodge reservation would be acceptable to the Democrats as a means of enabling them to save their faces."

Mr. Walsh made it plain that the Democrats did not intend to be dishonest with themselves or with the country on this or any other question involved in the reservations, by accepting some meaningless change in wordings and announcing that they had succeeded in preserving a principle.

Mr. Walsh also took occasion to reply to the criticism of the economic clauses of the treaty which is beginning to come from the Republican irreconcilables, and on which they intend to begin a new campaign next week. He said that their cries of honor come too late.

"As to the attacks which Senator Borah, Senator Knox and others are now making on the economic features of the treaty, it would have been well if they could have made their speeches eight months ago," said Senator Walsh. "Then President Wilson was standing all alone at Paris, trying to prevent wrongs from being written into the treaty that are now being criticised. He was fighting single-handed against the demands of the world's organized avarice.

"He was viciously attacked for intruding into the proposed decision regarding the Sarre Basin. The critics declared that he ought to let it alone and wait until some question was up in which the interests of the United States were involved. The partisan press astacked the President for 'arguing the case for Germany.'

Sees Loss to Production.

"His critics attack him for not accomplishing the things he then sought to do, but could not do alone. The treaty is now assailed for its injustices, its violation of economic reason, its repudiation of the fourteen points and the destruction of the nations of Central Europe, which we are told it will cause.

"We are told that these wrongs will reach out to all the world. Of course they will. They will affect our country, my own State, indeed. We in Montana produce vast quantities of copper, and Germany has been one of the great patrons of the copper mines. That market is gone, with the destruction of the German economic system. Likewise Germany's ability to buy our foodstuffs and other products is impaired to an extent that we must feel.

"But what do Senators propose that we do? It seems to me to be plain that our only recourse is to go into the League of Nations, and through the American representative there do all we can to modify and ameliorate the errors in the treaty."

Further discussion of the economic clauses was forecast today by the announcement of Senator Thomas, Democrat, of Colorado that he expected to consider them in a speech. Mr. Thomas said that these clauses constituted a repudiation of the agreement which President Wilson made with the Allies as to the basis of peace. He reiterated his determination to vote against ratification of the treaty so long as the objectionable features remained in it.

Uncertain on Wilson's Stand.

A leading Democrat, in discussing the situation within that party, said today that the chief trouble was that Democrats could not be content to support something which would get the votes of sixty-four Senators; that they wanted to get the President's "O.K." afterward. There was no doubt, the Senator said, that if during the discussion something should be worked out which on presentation to the President would be approved, it would command the instant support of more than forty greatly relieved Democrats.

The Republican irreconcilables also are being blamed in some quarters for the Democratic firmness on Article X. According to some mild reservationists, irreconcilable propaganda has been spread effectively among Democrats, but has been cleverly camouflaged.

The concession by irreconcilables of much of the strength they had counted on, to the Lodge group, was borne out by the Republican poll before referred to. Irreconcilables counted on thirty-eight votes in case modification of the Lodge program was permitted. This week, however, they said that only twenty of those thirty-eight votes remained. Of these twenty, fourteen were bitter-enders who never would vote for the treaty, and six were Lodge reservationists. The Republican poll of today showed, leaders said, that the irreconcilables could muster but eighteen votes, including Democrats.

Mild Group Makes New Draft.

Some of the mild group announced their readiness to amend the proposed reservation on Article X. in any way that would make it acceptable to the Democrats. Acting on a suggestion which they said Senator Underwood made, the mild group said tonight that they had prepared another draft, from which the blanket inhibition against the use of any governmental means under Article X. would be eliminated. They were willing to have their reservation read that the United States "assumes no obligation to preserve by the use of its military or naval forces or by the economic boycott or the use of its national resources the territorial integrity," &c., instead of "by the use of its military or naval forces, the economic boycott or by any other means," as it now reads. But this suggestions, while appealing to some Democrats, did not appear to be making much impression.

Senator Underwood, who has been in close touch with Senator Lodge recently, said that he was convinced that seventy-six Senators wanted something done, hence he thought that something would be done. Mr. Underwood is ready to do what he can among the Democrats, he indicated, to get support for a reasonable proposition.

Mr. Underwood's attitude toward the Republicans is causing some feeling among "Hitchcock Democrats." The Alabama Senator has let everybody in the Senate know that he regards this as a poor time to indulge in aloofness. He thinks that the thing to do is to get together and that the way to do it is to get together. He has told Republicans and Democrats alike that he has forgotten that they are separated by the Senate's middle aisle, or by any other gulf, and that he feels free to talk to any Senator who, like himself, wants the treaty ratified. If Senator Lodge or some other Republican evolves a satisfactory way round the Article X. mountain, Senator Underwood is ready to help obtain its acceptance by other Democrats, his friends said today.

Senator Hitchcock's friends—or some of them—feel that Mr. Underwood ought not to let the Republicans make use of his admittedly great influence with the Democrats to "put over" some Republican proposal.

RUMORS STIR FRENCH PRESS

Denounce Alleged American Attempt to Get State Monopolies for Loans.

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 12.—Rumors about a proposal by American interests that France turn over her tobacco and match monopolies in return for a large loan, coupled with the suggestion that the French cede one or two of their colonies in return for financial aid, give propaganda material to Paris journals which do not love Americans. They speak very sarcastically of "American aid," and say America seeks to make a colony out of France. Le Journal says:

"And what reason is there, then, why Americans should not take charge of our railroads, of our shipping lines, of our museums, of our Louvre, of the Journal office and of our opera? They would give us a lot of money, and the train from Nancy would get in on time, the steamer from Suresnes would beat all records, the Louvre would become 'the greatest show on earth,' the Journal Officiel would be illustrated with comic cartoons, and would have thirty pages of advertising, and the opera would sell cut rate tickets. And then we would be a sort of an American colony."

La Liberté devotes a half column to abuse of alleged American tactics. The Echo de Paris declares it would be beneath the dignity of France even to entertain such proposals and assures its readers that they have never been considered and never will be.

The Intransigeant asks after the tobacco, matches and colonies what else the Americans will try to corral.

Briand's paper, the Eclair, says: "Why, they don't even treat us as a second-rate country. They treat us as if we were finished. But we do not take the American too seriously. Nevertheless we are moved to ask—is it possible that all Yankees, like President Wilson, are suffering from thromboses?"

Notice to Readers

The shortage of print paper is so acute and the procurement of further supplies is so uncertain because of weather conditions that the New York morning newspapers have agreed to omit for the present the following routine records:

Court calendars.

Tabulated real estate transfers, mortgages, liens, etc.

Records of the Police, Fire and Educational Departments.

The publication of these records will be resumed by The New York Times as soon as possible.

HINT LLOYD GEORGE MAY REJOIN ASQUITH

PAISLEY ELECTION CLOSES

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—Paisley polled today in an election which is likely to be a milestone of considerable moment in British politics and perhaps in British national life.

A well-skilled observer just back in London from the Scotch manufacturing town, on which many anxious eyes have been bent for a couple of weeks past, says there was not the faintest indication upon which to base a definite prediction of the result of the poll, which will not be declared until Feb. 25, although it may be known in special circles before that date.

Paisley walls are bright with posters. "Wha wadna fight for Asquith?" asks one "Asquith the man we all trust," declares another, but the other side makes some pertinent appeals by questioning "Will Paisley take Fife's rejected?" and answering "No." "Vote for MacKean, kin of yer ain," is the exhortation on a Coalition Unionist placard, while the Labor candidate's agents have made great display of Lord Haldane's statement that "It's with Labor that hope lies for tomorrow." "Wait and see!" one of the most unjustifiable gags ever perpetrated upon an unsuspecting politician by wily opponents, is made great play with by both of Mr. Asquith's adversaries.

Hint Extraordinary Development.

Meanwhile, here in London the political gossips are agog with a story of an extraordinary development in the political situation. Since Parliament opened last Tuesday Mr. Lloyd George, while carrying the House of Commons with him as usual, has hardly improved his position in the country. His professed disregard of bye elections, which represent present day tendencies, has carried conviction nowhere outside the walls of Parliament, where it is to the interest of most members to believe that the mandate of the existing House of Commons has not yet run out. How long the Coalition will be able to carry on is more than ever the topic of keen discussion and the results from Paisley and other bye-elections are awaited with anxiety for the indications they will afford of national opinion.

To Reconcile Old Leaders.

If Asquith is returned by a big majority, it is being argued today, Lloyd George's best chance is to throw in his lot with his old chief, and some observers see in a certain relatively small incident of the week an almost definite indication that the Prime Minister is preparing to take that step. The incident in question is the appointment by A. P. Nicholson as chief Parliamentary correspondent of The Daily Chronicle. The Chronicle is Lloyd George's chief supporter in the press, and Nicholson for years past has been Asquith's warmest and closest friend in the ranks of Parliamentary journalism. Nicholson and Lloyd George have been observed hobnobbing together and parting with hearty handshakes.

From this, and the supposition that Nicholson would not espouse the cause of Lloyd George unless he could thereby advance himself, and the interesting suggestion that The Chronicle would not have approached Nicholson without a knowledge of coming events, it is being deduced that Lloyd George and Asquith are coming together again.

One politician who is well posted in regard to what passes behind the scenes pointed out to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent, with whom he was discussing this gossip, that the difficulties in the way of such an arrangement would not be raised by either Asquith or Lloyd George, but by some of Asquith's followers.

That speculative talk of this kind should be the topic of the hour in the Parliamentary lobbies is a clear indication of the growing belief that the days of the Coalition Government are numbered. The Unionists outside Parliament appear to be as dissatisfied with the existing arrangements as are the Independent Liberals. The only question is how long it will be before the sands of the Coalition run out.

POINDEXTER DENOUNCES LABOR POLITICAL PLANS

Charges That a Small Coterie Is Trying to Set Up a "Government Within a Government."

UTICA, N. Y., Feb. 12.—Charges that behind the announced plan of the American Federation of Labor to obtain the election of a Congress and a President favorable to its policies existed "a sinister movement of a small coterie of labor leaders," who have grown powerful by the contributions they have levied upon labor, "to set up a government within a government" were made here tonight by United States Senator Miles Poindexter of Washington in an address before the Utica Republican Club.

"There is no question of the right of the American Federation of Labor to secure control of Congress and of the Presidency by way of the ballot box, if it can do so in accordance with the proclamation it has just issued," he said. "It would be an evil day for the United States, and most of all for labor itself, if any class in this nation, whether employers or employes in industry, capital or labor, should succeed in any such program. But that is one of the perils which the nation must face as the price of free government.

HYLAN STARTS SOUTH TODAY, DEFYING HOODOO

Doesn't Fear Beginning Vacation on Friday, the 13th—Feels City Will Be Safe.

Mayor John F. Hylan is scheduled to leave for Palm Beach, Fla., today on his annual vacation. The fact that it is Friday, the 13th, is said not to have impressed the Mayor in the least. The date was chosen by the Mayor several weeks ago, but it was merely a tentative date, for he was not sure that the traction inquiry would be disposed of by that time.

Although the inquiry is still in progress, the Mayor feels that his presence in the city is no longer urgently needed. During the last two days he has also been going over the street cleaning situation with Commissioner MacStay and others, and is said to have become convinced that the situation is so well in hand that he can safely leave the cleaning up process with his Commissioners. Although the Mayor would not discuss his plans yesterday, his secretary, John F. Sinnott, said the Mayor had made all his plans to leave for the Southern resort this evening.

During his absence a Republican, Fiorello H. LaGuardia, President of the Board of Aldermen, will be acting Mayor. As the Mayor expects to be gone only two weeks, President LaGuardia will not have the authority to initiate any reforms in the conduct of the city Government. The Mayor will have to be absent from the city thirty days before his substitute will have the power to remove any official or change any of the Mayor's established policies.

OPPOSE HYLAN SCHOOL PLAN

Civil Service Reform Bureau Calls License System for Teachers Illegal.

Opposing Mayor Hylan's suggestion for legislation to license candidates graduating from the Teachers' Training School without further competitive tests, the Civil Service Reform Bureau has addressed a letter to the Mayor pointing out that such action would violate Article V., Section IX. of the State Constitution, which requires competitive examination for appointments in the civil service of the State, including the teaching force, wherever practicable. The letter, signed by Nelson S. Spencer, Chairman, and Harry W. Marsh, Secretary of the Civil Service Reform Association, says:

"By direction of the Executive Committee of the Civil Service Reform Association we respectfully ask your attention to the manifest unconstitutionality of any legislation such as you suggest in your letter to the Corporation Counsel concerning the appointments of teachers upon a mere high school and training school examination.

"The Constitution provides that appointments in the civil service shall be made as a result of a competitive examination so far as practicable. That competition is practicable has been proved by actual operation of such a system for over thirty years. During this period the public education law has recognized and provided for the enforcement of this constitutional provision.

"The examinations for promotions are not competitive nor is it possible that the standard of examination in the various schools should be uniform. By the elimination of the element of competition the real test of efficiency for appointment in the teaching force will be destroyed, and the present standard of character and ability of the teaching force will inevitably be degraded.

"Not only that, but appointments will immediately be made on a basis of favoritism, a situation to which the schools of our institutions can least afford to be subjected.

"We are confident that the enactment of any such law such as you suggest would produce confusion which would be most disastrous, pending its ultimate destruction as unconstitutional and void by the judgment of the courts."

Mrs. Alexis Carrel Returns.

The French Liner Rochambeau, which arrived here yesterday after a stormy voyage, had more than 370 cabin passengers, including Mrs. Alexis Carrel, wife of Dr. Carrel of the Rockefeller Institute; Maxwell Morehead, American Consul at St. Nazaire, and Mlle. Lucienne Moratille, a screen actress.

SIMS SAYS NATION IS DEAF TO CRITICS

Admiral Complains That He and Herbert C. Hoover Have Been Called Pro-British.

Disapproved of Articles That Assumed "America Was the Potent Factor."

Turning from his assigned topic of "The Americanism of Abraham Lincoln," with the explanation that he "would rather talk on the navy," Rear Admiral William S. Sims defended his recent course last night before the Jersey City Lincoln Club. He spoke in the Carteret Club in that city, asserting he had not sought publicity for his communications which aroused the pending controversy and accusing the American nation of not being willing to listen to criticism though "men are rewarded for it in Europe."

The Admiral said not only he but Herbert C. Hoover had been called pro-British, and that no man could tell the truth about the country in which he lived without being tagged "pro-something or other."

The Admiral disclosed later in his speech that he had written from England attempting to "tone down" news and headlines in newspapers on this side which, he said, "assumed that America was the potent factor at that time."

Likes to Leave Washington.

"In introducing me," began Admiral Sims, "your President has said that I have come from Washington. I like to come fom Washington; in fact I come from there whenever I can possibly do so. Although I am down for an address on 'Americanism' it is possible that you may want to hear more about the navy than my rather curious ideas concerning Americanism.

"Altogether we have been too fortunate in our history. Nations, like individuals, must lose some blessing to appreciate what they've had. America is still in the early twenties; all teeth are sound, but the wisdom teeth haven't come yet. We've never been defeated, never been humiliated. How about other countries?

"France knows what defeat means and realizes the requirements for national defense. Great Britain exhibits the same phenomena as we do. She was not prepared intellectually or morally for the war. The country that suffered national humiliation knows what national defense means. It has got to be efficient.

"You people catch us young and send us to the Naval Academy, and we spend our lives learning war, but you never pay any attention to what we say. Given a dull man who studies something all his life must know something about it.

"In December, 1910, I submitted a report to the Admiral commanding my division which stated that having discussed the subject with military and naval men of Great Britain and France, the consensus of opinion was that war would come within four years. That report went to Washington, and what do you suppose they did with it? I haven't an idea.

Criticism Invited Abroad.

"It is actually a fact that European nations not only invite criticism, but if the man points out that their national defense is not up to the mark they will reward him, not punish him. Lord Fisher has written violent criticism of the British Navy, alongside which anything I ever wrote was the mildest thing you ever saw in your life.

"There is only one country in the world where you don't allow military men to criticise, and that is this country. We are subject to court-martial and dismissal if we make criticism of the administration of naval affairs—what do you think of that? That is where your Americanism differs from the lens of any other country, when you muzzle the criticism of the only men who know anything about it.

"If any of you have had the curiosity to pick up the World's Work and read my article you will find no criticism there. The regulations are to send criticism through regular channels. That's what I've been doing in the last few weeks. All sorts of assumptions have been made about those criticisms, but there is nothing there not in accord with regulations. They were never given out save through official channels.

"It has been said that I attacked the navy. Lord bless your souls, gentlemen, pay 35 cents and see what I wrote about it.

"Assumption has been made that I have criticised the record of the navy." He paused a moment and added: "I have gone beyond the limits in praising the men for their work. I have told the truth. Some of this was not liked."

Tried to Tone Down News.

The Admiral said he wrote from England with an idea of "toning down" some of the news. "I wanted to modify some of the headlines that were appearing in our papers and were being reprinted on the other side. These headlines, or articles, assumed that the United States was the potent factor at that time. We then had only 3 per cent. of the fighting forces. It was the same: 'We're all right and if we're not we don't want to hear it.'

"It has been inferred that some naval officials have criticised the idea of having civilian authorities in charge of naval matters. I want to state emphatically there is nothing to it.

"It has been intimated that I am pro-British. It has further been said that I was the leading British Admiral in the American Navy. (This remark was greeted with tremendous applause.)

"On this point I want to say that I defy any man who is living in any country and studying conditions to tell the truth of what he sees and not be called pro-this-or-that of whatever country he is in.

"Look at Hoover. He's been called pro-British. Let me add now, and let me add emphatically that any criticism that I have made has been made for the benefit of the navy. We got away with this job this time, but we may be up against it next time with a navy that is not busy fighting the navies of other countries at the same time.

"This is a fight of principle but not against personality."

SETS GEN. NIGRA FREE IN DRAMATIC SCENE

D'Annunzio at Fiume Pays Elaborate Honors to Officer Kidnapped from Rome.

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MILAN, Feb. 12.—General Nigra has been released from captivity in Fiume under circumstances every whit as melodramatic as his kidnapping some time ago by d'Annunzian desperadoes.

At 9 o'clock last Monday morning superior officers, under instructions from d'Annunzio, presented themselves at the door of the palatial apartment wherein General Nigra was confined and politely bade him to step out. When the General appeared on the threshold a fanfare of trumpets resounded through the palace and he was conducted along a line of infantry standing at salute to the generalissimo's hall of state.

After some grandiloquent speechmaking and cordial handshaking d'Annunzio accompanied his hostage to a motor car which General Caviglia, Commander in Chief of the Venetian Army, had at the request of the Fiume command dispatched for the purpose.

All the troops belonging to the Arditti company which had carried out the capture lined up en route in full dress uniform to render the military salute to the departing General, who having been formally extradited and released was driven to Trieste.

Max Gegna, 'Cellist, Gives Recital.

Max Gegna, a 'cellist of musical quality, who has before appeared here, gave a recital last evening at Aeolian Hall. He played Bach's suite No. 3 in C major for 'cello alone, and with Rudolph Gruen the "Symphonic Variations" of Boellmenn, the adagio from Dvorak's B minor concerto, pieces by Sinding and Popper, and Russian folk songs arranged by Mr. Gegna himself.

escaped from the Mountjoy Jail, was rearrested, and again escaped, only to be recaptured recently, was tried today before a court-martial.

The charge against Barton was that at Shillelagh in February, 1919, he delivered a speech in which, referring to the imprisonment of the local Sinn Feiner Fleming, he said:

"I do not make a threat, but if Fleming dies in jail there will be reprisals against Lord French (Viscount French, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland,) and Frank Brooke, (member of the Viceroy's advisory council,) who will suffer injuries as he did."

It is alleged that he repeated the same threat at Carnew. The court reserved decision. Barton offered no defense.

A report was in circulation after the trial that Barton had been rescued. This proved to be incorrect. Raiders intended to effect the release of the prisoner, but attacked the wrong car and Barton was carried to the jail and locked up.

The attempt at rescue was carried out by twenty armed men, who attacked a military motor car in Berkeley Street today and ordered the driver and four armed soldiers out of the car.

It was said that the prisoner being conveyed to Mountjoy Prison was carried off by the raiders, and for some time this was believed to have been Barton.

Miss Elliott Ill, Rests on Holiday.

Maxine Elliott, whose illness on Wednesday night delayed the performance of "Trimmed in Scarlet" for fifteen minutes between acts, rested all day yesterday, and both holiday performances of her play were canceled. It was said that she was much improved, and that she would resume her rôle at the Maxine Elliott Theatre tonight. Miss Elliott will conclude her engagement tomorrow.

Generals on the list of persons whose extradiction is demanded by the Entente had crossed the German border into Holland, which report is emphatically denied, it was learned at the Foreign Office today that Holland is taking steps to prevent the coming into the country of any German whose presence is likely to cause trouble to her.

The view of Holland, it was explained, is that the former Emperor and former Crown Prince, who are already here, are entitled to such protection as the Dutch law requires, but that the country does not desire the presence of any others.

AIM AT CLOSER ALLIED ACCORD

Anglo-French Relations, It Is Hoped, Will Be Cleared in London.

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—Three allied Premiers, Lloyd George, Millerand and Nitti, resumed this morning at 10 Downing Street their deliberations on peace. They were assisted by Lord Curzon, Arthur J. Balfour, Bonar Law, Marshal Foch, General Weygand, Chief of the French staff, the French Ambassador, and M. Berthelot of the French Foreign Office.

Their meeting, THE NEW YORK TIMES learns, was directed in part to a survey of the work before them and deliberation as to the order and methods for the consideration of subjects.

The peace treaties with Hungary and Turkey are among the principal matters before them and as the latter involves a decision on the fate of Constantinople and the Dardanelles it is impossible to exaggerate its importance. The prespera publish tonight the following Havas dispatch:

"WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—It is said in official circles that President Wilson intends to reply to the message of the Crown Prince offering to surrender to the Allies in place of the 900 Germans demanded by the Entente.

"White House circles state that in replying President Wilson may take occasion to make known publicly that he was always absolutely hostile to the demands of the Allies on the matter of the surrender of war culprits. He is expected to state that he intends to oppose energetically any action with the object of obtaining extradition for judgment of all these Germans, both civil and military."

ence of Foch is understood to mean that the situation in Poland and the threat of Bolshevist aggression will be reviewed.

It is hoped that there will be full and frank discussions between Lloyd George and Millerand of the entire field of Anglo-French relations. Recently a spirit of criticism of British policy has manifested itself in certain portions of the Paris press and most sections of the London press have been saying that the British Government ought not to lose this opportunity of clearing up all possible causes of disagreement.

Financial representatives of the powers in the conference had a special meeting to consider questions of European finance, in regard to which it may be surmised that the absence of an American representative did not tend to simplify the discussion. The absence of an American representative at this London conference, which is a continuation of the Paris Peace Conference, it was stated that "the United States is not represented because it has not appointed anybody to act as its representative."

There is little doubt that the prevailing view of the conference could be expressed unofficially as one of regret that American representation is lacking. The solutions of the Turkish and Adriatic problems are almost inextricably dependent upon American co-operation and at least will require American assent before they can be put into effect.

Suggestions were heard today that the allied conference might address to Washington a memorial pointing out the advantage of American representation at the conference but no reliable foundation for believing that such a step is contemplated was forthcoming and it is probable that the conference will be carried on under precedents set during the later stages of the Paris conferences.

WILSON TO HEAR RAIL MEN TODAY

and longshoremen were understood to have been settled several weeks ago, but Mr. Hines told them at that time he would discuss their grievances further whenever they desired. P. J. Coyle, President of station employes union, said after the conference he had not received what he "intended getting," but that the question had not been disposed of finally.

Mr. Hines did not confer with W. G. Lee, President of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, who has abrogated his organization's wage agreement. A conference had been tentatively arranged, but it was deferred pending the White House decision.

White House officials indicated strongly their feeling that the crisis has not passed, even though the negotiations thus far have been harmonious. Developments have come so rapidly in the last forty-eight hours that further changes—and any one of several which might prove serious—could not be surprising. There was no intimation as to what these turns in the situation might be, but the gravity of the situation was emphasized several times during the day.

Counter to this, however, was the suggestion offered in many quarters that regardless of the outcome, rumors of a general strike of all rail workers were not to be regarded seriously at this time because of the pending legislation. It was pointed out that Federal wage boards have failed to satisfy few of the organizations which have come before them with grievances and that the railroad employes generally have confidence in any report which such a body as is proposed in the Cummins-Esch bill would make in their case.

Representative Blanton, Democrat, Texas, made public today a letter to President Wilson expressing the hope that he would not "permit Mr. Hines to accede to present railroad demands."

Mr. Blanton told the President that in the last few months he had received more than 5,000 letters from Democrat voters "asserting that if the Administration truckles to another demand from organized labor, they will no longer vote the Democratic ticket."

"A showdown must come sooner or later," Mr. Blanton said, "and now is the opportune time. The American people are ready for it."

SHOPMEN ARE CONCILIATORY.

Willing to Consider Any "Fair Proposition" from President.

DETROIT, Feb. 12.—Any "fair proposition" put forward by President Wilson in the railway wage controversy will receive the serious consideration of officers of the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way and Railway Shop Laborers, it was announced at headquarters here tonight. The statement was also attributed to President Allen E. Barker that a more conciliatory attitude would be adopted with President Wilson if the President reopened negotiations with the maintenance of way men, who have been ordered on strike next Tuesday.

"We will try to do the right thing, as we always have, with the President," Mr. Barker said. "If he puts forward any fair proposition we will accept it. We only ask a square deal."

Mr. Barker declined to say whether he would hold up the strike in event the President wished more time to consider the matter. He also declined to discuss a report that he had been asked if he would call off the strike if a wage tribunal were appointed. No such proposal had yet been made, it was said.

"If the railway men's demands are rejected," Mr. Barker said, "they will undoubtedly act as a unit. Two of the brotherhoods have moved. I cannot see how the other twelve can hang back. I believe the shop crafts will be the next to back us up."

cannot proceed with them without the support of England and France. After yesterday's declaration she must renounce her plans. France is not able to help her alone in a campaign against the Bolsheviki, and she must take this into account, too, that the new British policy is that of the country, not of a party. The Conservative wing only remains hostile to the idea and it cannot modify the policy. Italy also supports London in desiring to resume commercial relations, but only Lloyd George imagines that it is possible to resume commercial relations without recognizing the Soviet Government."

The Temps in a leading article describes Lloyd George's theory that the Soviet Government will not survive the resumption of commercial relations as ingenious.

"It must be added," says the Temps, "that it is not desired only to fight Bolshevism. The exchange rate of the pound in America compels England to pay a heavy tribute to the United States. She wants to rid herself of that burden. She is looking for other providers of wheat and raw material. She wants to find it in Russia, where the pound sterling has an enormous purchasing power.

"It remains to be seen if the Lloyd George theory can be confirmed by facts. It is founded on suppositions and some of these suppositions need careful examination. Can Russia export a sufficient amount of merchandise to lower the cost of living in Western Europe?"

The Temps believes that it cannot. Reproduction, power and transport have all suffered too much under Bolshevist rule. But little hope is entertained that Premier Millerand will be able to oppose any more workable policy at the London conference.

Much criticism is also expressed of Lord Curzon's statement that the treaty must be revised. With a kind of surprised and despairing cry at the new English policy, all articles end on the same note, that whatever else is done the alliance and unity must be maintained.

PRAISE LLOYD GEORGE REPLY TO RADICALS

London Papers, The Daily News Excepted, Give Hearty Support to Premier's Fighting Speech.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—In the Commons last night the first division of the session—on nationalisation of mines—showed no weakening of the Coalition's solidarity and the Premier's speech gave immense satisfaction to his supporters. It is agreed that it was eloquent and one of the best fighting speeches Lloyd George has ever made and there was a great outburst of applause when he sat down.

A. P. Nicholson, writing in The Chronicle says the Premier has given a definite lead to the Coalitionists which will tend to efface some party differences and has rallied the Unionist wing of the Coalition. It is admitted, however, that this first move of labor was a weak one and the rejection of Brace's amendment was to be expected even by the Labor Party itself.

The Premier's speech and policy toward nationalization meets with hearty approval of most of the newspapers, including those which earlier in the week were attacking Lloyd George.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—The question of the nationalization of Great Britain's mines must be decided outside of Parliament in view of the Government's refusal to act, Vernon Hartshorn, Labor member for Glamorgan, declared in a statement to The Evening News today.

"In my opinion we shall be in the thick of a national strike in six weeks," the Labor member is quoted as saying. "If it comes to a question of striking for an increase in wages or for nationalization I think it will be for nationalisation."

The miners get little consolation from the press over the defeat of the nationalisation of mines in the House of Commons by yesterday's vote of 329 to 94. The Times believes that the Prime Minister spoke the minds of the people when he said they would fight to the last against dictation from a privileged minority. This was in allusion to the threatened industrial pressure, as to which The Daily Telegraph says that it is the Prussianism of a privileged caste, and that it is well the issue has been so plainly stated. The Daily Chronicle, after condemning the threats of violent measures, says that what the miners want is not nationalization but syndicalism, and it is a waste of time to argue about the former.

The Daily News, the only paper supporting the miners, says that by the attitude he adopted in the debate Mr. Lloyd George presented the miners with an unanswerable case, adding that though the Prime Minister may be counting upon their answering his provocation in kind, they will hardly fall into the trap at this juncture.

TELEPHONE PLANT FOR $200

Owner Sells and Agrees to Make Repairs at 75 Cents an Hour.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 12.—The Public Utility Commission has approved the sale of the A. B. Reading telephone system, in operation for twenty years in the small town of Flemington, Hunterdon County, to the New Jersey Telephone Company for $200. It was stated in the application for the board's approval that the system was in need of extensive repairs and could not be operated at a profit as an independent concern, evidently having outlived its usefulness.

EX-KAISER DISAPPROVES.

Offer of Ex-Crown Prince Believed Seriously Made in Hague Quarters.

THE HAGUE, Feb. 11.—It is declared in reliable quarters that former Crown Prince Frederick William was serious in making his offer to the Entente Governments to surrender in place of the Germans on the extradition list, and that he is inclined to believe that the Allies will accept his plan. It is learned here that former Emperor William is strong in his disapproval of his son's action.

Nothing was known at Wieringen of the ex-Crown Prince's intentions before his message to the heads of the various Governments had been dispatched, and the only notification he gave was to the Dutch Government when he sent the communication abroad.

Newspaper reports that the Grand Duke of Hesse and his son and likewise seven German Generals named on the extradition list had escaped into Holland are discredited at the Dutch Foreign Office. That office declared it did not consider it possible for the men named to cross into Dutch territory.

M'ADOO TELLS WHY GAMBLERS GO FREE

Detectives Make Raids on Insufficient Evidence, Chief City Magistrate Says.

GIVES ADVICE TO POLICE

If Officers Entered Games They Might Get Convictions—Favors Stronger Vagrancy Law.

William McAdoo, Chief City Magistrate, yesterday explained to a reporter for The New York Times why he and other Magistrates in the city have censured certain detectives for arraigning before them men whom the detectives accused of being common gamblers, although they were unable to submit legal proof of their charges. Within the last year Magistrates McAdoo, Corrigan, Nolan, Lavine, and others have repeatedly denounced detectives for arresting on insufficient evidence men found in alleged gambling houses and other disreputable resorts. On several occasions the magistrates have declared their belief the prisoners were engaged in gambling, but they refused to entertain charges because the detectives in their testimony did not furnish evidence which would substantiate such charges.

More Than 100 Discharged.

Since the beginning of the week Magistrates Corrigan and Frothingham have discharged more than 100 men who were arrested by detectives in raids on three alleged gambling houses. In each instance the Magistrates roundly scored the detectives for not producing sufficient evidence that the men were committing disorderly acts in the raided premises. The detectives declared they made raids because they thought gambling was going on in the places, but admitted that the disorderly conduct charges were made against the men when sufficient evidence of gambling was not to be obtained.

The last case of the kind was brought before Magistrate Frothingham yesterday in the Jefferson Market Court. Detectives of the Second Inspection District arraigned twenty-seven men before the Magistrate and declared they found them making unusual noises in a tenement house in Elizabeth Street near Police Headquarters. They said they believed the men were playing craps and poker in the place, but they could not swear the games were being played as a matter of business.

"I regret very much that the police insist on making raids of this kind without first obtaining warrants," said the Magistrate in discharging the prisoners. "If a detective has insufficient evidence of gambling, the Magistrate to whom he applies for a warrant will inform him to that effect, and thus innocent persons will not be brought to court on charges of this character."

Magistrate McAdoo made it clear yesterday that if gambling houses are in operation in the city the police have the power to suppress them. He said that the Dowling anti-gambling law, as interpreted by the higher courts of the State, defined the meaning of a "common gambler," and placed the police of the city in possession of a definite means by which gambling, at least, can be stopped. If two persons engage in a game of chance as a matter of entertainment, Magistrate McAdoo explained, they are not gambling in the eyes of the law. If, however, one or more persons control a gambling game for profit, he said, he or they are guilty of gambling, and are committing a felony.

Against Premature Raids.

Mr. McAdoo declared that the time had come when detectives must stop breaking into alleged gambling houses without first having obtained evidence against the places, and that if the police want to suppress gambling they can do so by assigning detectives not known to the gambling fraternity to obtain evidence against them. He said that "cappers" for gambling houses and other vicious resorts in the city infest the "white light" district and other places in the city where gamblers are known to congregate, and that if detectives are sent to pick up an acquaintance with these "cappers" they can obtain admission to gambling houses just as do the victims of the gamblers.

A report has been in circulation in the Police Department for several days that officials at Police Headquarters have been compiling statistics revealing the number of arrests of persons on gambling charges during the last year, and the small number of instances in which Magistrates have held the prisoners for trial in General Sessions. It is known that up to two years ago Chief Magistrate McAdoo's court in the old Police Headquarters Building in Mulberry Street was used as a sort of clearing house for gambling cases. In almost every instance where a police official wanted to suppress a gambling house he first obtained evidence against the place and then sent his detectives to Magistrate McAdoo, who issued a warrant for the gamblers. Mr. McAdoo admitted yesterday that no such request has been made of him in almost two years.

"There is much confusion in the minds not only af laymen, but lawyers, not to speak of Judges, as to the proper construction of the laws of this State relating to gambling," said Mr. McAdoo. "This may possibly account for the apparently contradictory judgments of individual Magistrates and the apparent conflict even of opinions of the higher courts with reference to such offenses as keeping gambling houses and making books on horse races.

"These offenses are in the main covered by two sections of the penal law, 970 and 986, the former with reference to common gamblers and the keeping of gambling places and the latter pool selling, bookmaking on horse races.

Crime of Gambling Defined.

"It is frequently stated, and to some extent rightfully so, that the making of bets between persons under certain conditions is not gambling. If I make a bet with you to be determined by any element of chance neither of us is a common gambler within the meaning of the law. As I understand it, a person is a common gambler within the meaning of the law who engages in any gambling or banking 'game' where money or other property is dependent upon the result. The essence of the offense appears to be that the game is solely and only for money or other valuable property and has no reference whatever to recreation or pleasure; that all the players do not meet upon the same terms as other participants in the game, but that some one acts as banker or dealer or in general control of the game.

"It is not necessary under these circumstances to prove the persons so playing such a game depend for a livelihood upon gaming or that that was their principal occupation. The word common is applicable to those, under the conditions stated above, who engage in a game solely and only for the purpose of winning money or other valuable things and unconnected with any social elements or amusement.

"The higher courts of this State seem to distinguish between such games as poker and klondike. They treat the one as played more or less universally for amusement as well as gaming purposes, and the other distinctly as a gambling game, and no doubt in that view all players where a roulette wheel is used, having in view the latest decision of the Supreme Court, Second Department, with reference to the word "common," would be indictable under the statute. In a game such as craps it necessarily requires proof that the defendant or defendants actually engaged in the game. Unless inside evidence is gotten this is very difficult, because only one man at a time is throwing the dice, and at the instant of a raid there is no opportunity for more than a hurried look at the situation. In fact, from the first time an attempt is made to enter the players have disposed of the dice and money.

Law Aimed at Proprietors.

"If gambling takes place in any enclosure those who control the premises are guilty under the law of maintaining a gambling establishment, whether owners or tenants, and the same applies to any one who furnishes apparatus for gambling purposes. The main object of the law is to deal with those who are the responsible heads of gambling places, and not with the foolish and misled people who go there to make bets, although, as pointed out above, under certain conditions these people can be complained of as common gamblers.

"Before a Magistrate can hold any person as guilty under these laws, he must have sufficient evidence within the rules laid down by the law. If there is a gambling place across the street, whether it is a roulette wheel, poker or crap, the police can deal with it in various ways. Violation of the gambling laws is a felony. The law says that the police, having reasonable ground to believe that a felony is being committed in certain premises, have the right if necessary to force their way therein. They are also given very large powers under Section 315 of the Charter as to policing such places. In fact, it is made compulsory upon them to do so. If they are apprised of their existence, and this also covers disorderly houses.

"To get a case which will stand the test of the court against those conducting such games in a case like that, it would be necessary to employ officers in plain clothes, unknown to the gamblers and, generally speaking, not to be recognized in the locality, and, possibly with the aid of outside agents, effect an entrance ostensibly as gamblers themselves. Once in the house, they would gain admittance for others, and when solid and convincing evidence would be obtained, which would convict in a court of law. To do this requires intelligence and the expenditure of considerable money. Sporadic raids, with subsequent discharge of the defendants in court, are of no value.

"The same applies to the conviction of book-makers. Plain clothes men or women detectives can make the bets, which these fellows are only too glad to take, and thus the evidence can be obtained. These gamblers know by sight practically all of the plain clothes men on certain staffs. Naturally, they are on guard as soon as they see them.

Why Prisoners Are Discharged.

"In this case of the young men arrested as for disorderly conduct tending to a breach of the peace I was compelled to discharge them because there was literally no evidence upon which they could be held. Conduct tending to a breach of the peace is such as would irritate, annoy and beget resentment of law-abiding people in public places or otherwise. It must be such as would endanger public peace, with the probable resentment which it will beget. It is thus made, very properly in a great city like this, to cover a multitude of offenses and is the greatest protection for law and order known to the whole machinery of the law.

"About a year ago on the complaint of officers who swore that they were attracted at 2 o'clock in the morning by the volume of sound noise and disorder which emanated from a building on a congested street, and which was in the nature of things interfering with the sleep and orderly habits of people in the neighborhood, I convicted a number of men for this offense. The officers swore they were attracted to the place by the noise and, as the defendants were all alien enemies, the war being on at the time, I concluded that their conduct might seriously endanger the peace in the neighborhood.

"After this, and possibly acting on that case, the police began bringing great numbers of defendants into these courts, charging them, not with gambling in any wise, but with disorderly conduct tending to a breach of the peace in that within certain enclosures or places they were making considerable noise while playing games of craps or standing on the street corners while taking bets on horse races.

"In the case last Sunday the officer testified that he and another policeman went to the place in question because of a neighborhood complaint, and that they were not attracted by any noise whatever. When they got to the door they heard considerable noise within, indicating, as they believed, the playing of craps. Thereupon they entered and arrested all within the room. Upon this evidence these men could not possibly be convicted of disorderly conduct as defined in the law. To do so would be in direct violation not only of the plain construction of the statute but of the decisions of the Court of General Sessions, which on appeal reviews those of the Magistrates.

Arrests in Block Illegal.

"The Court of General Sessions has recently rendered a decision augmenting a former one from them to the effect that not only are these arrests in block illegal, but if there was any disorder the police would have to prove it as to each individual defendant. That means in plain words they would have to show which one of the parties in the room made the disorder or was guilty of the conduct tending to a breach of the peace, and could not charge them all together as acting in concert. This construction of the law is absolutely binding upon the Magistrates. Under these circumstances arrests by the police, however well-intentioned and however disreputable these fellows may otherwise be and undeserving of any public sympathy, are well calculated to bring the law into disrespect. It is certainly encouraging to many of these fellows, who at best are loafers.

"When I was Police Commissioner, knowing that spasmodic and irregular raids without evidence would be worse than useless, I organized a squad of policemen taken from various parts of the greater city, and most of them unknown in this borough, and in order to prevent their recognition I even hired for them a room in the neighborhood to which they could go and report to the Lieutenant in charge, so as not to be seen around this building. I used outside aides, and necessarily spent considerable money in obtaining evidence. We never raided any of these places without inside evidence of a substantial character, and we rarely failed to get it where the officers were really in earnest and wanted to get results. Of course, you have to spend money. A General might as well report that he lost the battle because he had been economical in the use of ammunition. The battle against those vices condemned by law, and which in the very nature of things are secret, must be conducted in the same way.

Urges Stronger Vagrancy Law.

"As to those chronic loafers and possibly criminals and rogues who spend most of their time playing craps and betting on horse races, the best way to deal with them, in my judgment, is to reconstruct and strengthen the vagrancy law and that relating to men without employment, as provided for in the statute enacted during the war. I have said this to those in authority a long time ago, that the act should be remodeled and strengthened, so as to cover these scamps, drug addicts, gangsters, vicious loafers, robbers, burglars and pickpockets. To that end the statute enacted during the war should not only not be repealed but be strengthened and modified to suit peace conditions, especially as far as it relates to this and other large cities.

"I am making this statement, not to hinder or obstruct the police but to prevent a misunderstanding with serious consequences between them and the magistracy.

"In cases like those I have stated the Magistrates are absolutely compelled to make discharges. We do not create the law. We have to follow it. I repeat again that it is not out of sympathy with this class of offenders, who stay up all night risking the money which belongs to their families and those depending upon them, and which in its turn leads to idleness, theft, vicious habits and serious crimes. If there were two buildings across the street, one containing gambling establishments in which large sums of money were played for, and in the basement of another a game of craps played by young loafers, there is no difference in the rules of evidence to obtain a conviction against either of them.

Rights of the Police.

"In other words, the police have just as much right to break into these big gambling establishments, as such, for instance, as was complained against before me recently by a man who said he was fleeced in two of them, as they have to make a raid on the other kind of places. In fact, they have a distinct advantage with regard to the bigger place, for they have reasonable grounds to suspect its character. As I said before, they can even break into it and they are compelled under the Charter to inspect it closely night and day. If they failed to do so they would be liable to the law, as shown by the indictment and trial of certain police officials some years ago.

"If the authorities are really in earnest to apprehend, convict and punish, and place in custody the class of loafers who thrive on vices or exist by crime, they ought, in addition to what I have said above with reference to the wartime loafer act, ask the Legislature for an extension of the terms covering disorderly persons as defined in the Code of Criminal Procedure. This act, after earnest endeavor, was amended so as to completely cover fortune tellers and provide for their punishment. I have no doubt that if the matter is intelligently presented to the Legislature, the Governor, and the Mayor, equally effective amendments can be made as to other disorderly persons. Let us enforce the law by law, and not otherwise.

"In addition to all this, under Section 996 of the penal law the District Attorney can start investigations or proceedings before any court or Magistrate and compel any one whom he suspects or has reason to believe is conducting a gambling establishment, or violating any of the sections of the law with reference to gambling, to testify to all the facts within his knowledge and bring all books and papers which might be required of him.

"This is known as the Dowling law, and at one time all the well-known gamblers in town were subjected to such an examination. The act has been declared by the courts as constitutional and it was intended to be a most powerful weapon against this vice. Managers of suspected gambling clubs could be brought before the court or Magistrate under this section and compelled to testify."

Feed Men Approve Ousting Socialists

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Feb. 12.—The Eastern Federation of Feed Merchants, in convention here today, adopted a resolution approving the course of Speaker Thaddeus C. Sweet and his associates in the Assembly in refusing to seat "certain disloyal, un-American members." Drastic repressive measures to stamp out radicalism were urged.

Bill to Restore State Conventions.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 12.—Restoration of the old-time convention system for nominating candidates for public office is provided for in a bill introduced in the Legislature today by Assemblyman Theodore R. Stitt, Republican, of Brooklyn. The measure also provides for the election of delegates to State and national conventions by the convention system.

Labor Approves 4 Proposed Bills.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 12.—The Executive Committee of the State Federation of Labor approved four legislative bills at a meeting here today. They were on health insurance, extension of the workmen's compensation law to cover occupational diseases, increasing the pay of attendants in State hospitals, and giving a $200 a year increase to the firemen of New York City.

To Extradite Rose Pastor Stokes.

EXPECT GRAND JURIES TO ACT

Socialist Party as a part of the plan to bring about conditions favorable to revolution, and as instruments of revolution, and not to remedy industrial evils. The revolutionary purpose and non-political character of such acts make them treasonable, and, whether criminal or not in the absence of such purpose, treasonable with it.

6. The five Assemblymen stand squarely with their party for the overthrow of our Government. Three of them—Claessens, Solomon and Waldman—avowed these doctrines as candidates for the Assembly.

7. The five Assemblymen by their pledges and speeches, have rendered themselves amenable to the terms of the Espionage act and should be convicted under its terms.

8. It is the supreme duty of the Assembly and its loyal members, who have taken an oath to support the Constitution of the State of New York and the Constitution of the United States, to exercise their ample power to exclude from the legislative body of the greatest State in the Union enemies of the State and of the United States, who would destroy both constitutions and the Governments organized under them. Tolerance of such a presence would involve a breach of their oath as loyal men and Assemblymen.

The votes of the Socialist Assemblymen on military and naval appropriations while the country was at war are cited as evidence that the pledge made by them to their party not to vote appropriations for either offensive or defensive warfare was regarded by them as more binding than the obligation they assumed to uphold the State Constitution. The brief declares that evidence upon the record shows that the Socialists virtually abdicated their functions as Assemblymen by their promise to subordinate their conscience and patriotism on every vote in the Assembly to the block system of party voting; by their promise whenever directed by the duespaying membership to vote in any particular manner on any bill or as to the appointment or selection of any of the numerous public officials to be chosen by the Legislature, and by promising to resign in advance of taking office as a pledge of their performing their promise.

Control of Dues Paying Members.

Under the National Constitution of the Socialist Party, says the brief, the dues paying membership or the executive committee having control over the official action of the Assemblyman might be composed wholly of aliens and is so composed in part. The brief estimates that from 150 to 200 dues paying members control Waldman's district and between 200 and 300 Claessens's district.

Speeches by Assemblymen Claessens, Solomon and Waldman are quoted in support of the contention that they stand solidly with the party for the overthrow of the Government.

To back up the recommendation that the five Assemblymen be prosecuted under the Espionage act, the brief quotes from a decision of Justice Garvin of the United States Circuit Court in the case involving the three Socialists who were convicted in Syracuse of violating the law through the distribution of inflammatory literature:

"A statement was made public tonight on behalf of the Socialists in which it was hinted that they were ousted because they were hostile to increased fare legislation, soon to be introduced.

"We came to Albany thoroughly prepared to fight the traction thieves to the last ditch," the statement said. "We came to offer a constructive traction program—a way out of the chaotic financial condition of the roads. We stand ready to convict the traction interests out of their own mouths. To what extent these same interests were responsible for the removal of their own opponents from the Assembly only time will tell."

MAY PENALIZE SHIPLACOFF.

Aldermen Expected to Take Up Socialist's Pro-German Utterances.

A special meeting of the Rules Committee of the Board of Aldermen will be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at City Hall and, according to information obtained yesterday, the radical utterances of Alderman Abraham Shiplacoff, made in a speech on Wednesday night at the Queens County Labor Lyceum, may be brought before the meeting for action.

Should the Rules Committee decide to go into the matter, a resolution will be prepared and introduced at the next meeting of the Aldermen. If the resolution should call for such procedure, the Board could either suspend or expel Shiplacoff and develop a situation akin to that at Albany.

The Socialist Alderman, who spoke at a meeting called in the cause of his suspended comrades of the Assembly, was quoted as saying the Assembly was made up of "poor boobs," while his associates in the Board of Aldermen were "a bunch of hypocrites." He was reported to have referred to President Wilson thus: "The little tin god in the White House has collapsed," and was further reported to have said:

"The conditions imposed on the German people are the greatest injustice ever perpetrated by a group of countries, and it won't be long before they realize they went too far. There is enough life left in the German people, and the time will soon come when millions of workingmen will take up the fight against the Hohenzollerns of Washington, Paris and other parts of the world.

"If I am to be charged with pro Germanism, and probably there are Department of Justice agents here, let them take this down: I am for the German people, as I always was, and we always were."

PREDICT QUICK VOTE ON RAILROAD BILL

CONFERENCE REPORT READY

Plumb Plan League Sends Protests Against Agreement to Members of Congress.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12 (Associated Press).—While some opposition to the Railroad bill as finally agreed upon in conference has developed, Senate and House leaders predicted today that the conference report on the measure would be promptly adopted, so that the legislation would be on the statute books before the roads are returned to private control March 1.

The final draft of the conference report is now being made, and it will be presented to the Senate Saturday or Monday. The House expects to take the report up Monday or Tuesday at the latest, and leaders said today it would be disposed of in two days.

Chairman Esch of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, one of the authors of the Railroad bill, and other leaders expressed confidence that opposition by House Democrats would not delay passage of the measure.

They based their prediction upon the fact that the bill as rewritten in conference is substantially the same as the Esch bill recently passed by the House. Senate provisions to which there was objection, including the anti-strike section, creation of a transportation board and compulsory consolidations were stricken out in conference. The essential addition to the House bill was the fixing of a guaranteed return of 5½ per cent.

"With the time already fixed by President Wilson for return of the roads and the widespread demand from the people that they be handed back," Chairman Esch said today, "failure to enact necessary legislation before March 1 would be disastrous. I am satisfied, however, that the House will adopt the conference report without delay."

Chairman Cummins of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee and one of the framers of the bill said there was no doubt of the acceptance of the conference report by the Senate. "There is not opposition to the bill in the Senate other than was expressed when the bill originally was up for consideration," he said.

Senator Pomerene, Democrat, Ohio, one of the Senate conferees, said he was "very confident that the conference report would be approved."

"While I have not undertaken any canvass of the House," said Senator Robinson, Democrat, Arkansas, another conferee, "I am sure it will pass that body and I am sure a large number of Democrats will vote for the report."

An equally optimistic view was expressed by Senator Lodge, the Republican leader. "It most certainly will pass the Senate and I feel sure it will also pass the House," he said.

Senator Smoot, Republican, Utah, said reports that Congress would not finally approve the bill as modified by the conferees "were only part of the propaganda that has been circulated against the bill."

Letters protesting against the conference agreement were sent today to all members of Congress by the Plumb Plan League, which reiterated its advocacy of retention of the carriers by the Government for at least two years.

MRS. FROST FILES ANSWER.

Alleges Cruelty Against Husband and Names Co-respondents.

Counsel for Mrs. Rosalind Harrington Frost filed with Vice Chancellor Stevenson in the Chancery Court in Jersey City yesterday her answer to a suit for divorce, filed several weeks ago by her husband, Elihu E. Frost, formerly Vice President of the Electric Boat Company, in which Mrs. Frost makes counter charges against her husband, alleging cruelty and naming two women as co-respondents.

Mrs. Frost's answer made twenty printed pages. She averred among other things, that her husband during the war made $1,000,000 in one day through his connection with the Electric Boat Company. She also alleges that Frost on several occasions was brutal to her while they were living in Atlantic City, kicking her out of bed on one occasion when they were quarreling.

Mr. and Mrs. Frost, the answer states were married in Jersey City on June 18, 1915. She was 25 and he 55. After their marriage they went to his home in Atlantic City, where, she alleges, he forced her to live in seclusion, and ordered servants to escort her whenever she desired to go shopping. In May, 1919, Mrs. Frost says her husband sent her to Reno, Nev., to obtain a divorce.

Vice Chancellor Stevenson announced yesterday that he would conduct a hearing on the matter in the Court of Chancery in Paterson next Monday.

Rabbi to Marry Fifth Brother.

When the Rev. Dr. Samuel Buckler, Deputy Commissioner of Public Markets, performs a marriage ceremony next Monday night in Temple Kol Israel for his brother, Louis L. Buckler, and Miss Irene Barash of Bayonne, N. J., he will have joined the fifth of his brothers in matrimony. Soon thereafter Rabbi Buckler will perform a marriage ceremony for his sister, Miss Regina Buckler of 788 Park Avenue, Brooklyn, whose engagement has been announced.

Who Pays For It?

Some people have inquired whether the cost of advertising is not added to the cost of advertised merchandise.

Large sums are spent for advertising, and the consumer sometimes questions whether, as usual, it falls to his lot to pay the bill.

Instances could be shown where advertising added to the price of the goods.

Many instances have been shown where advertising lowered the price of goods.

In the long run, competition eliminates nonproductive expenditure.

Manufacturers obviously do not give millions of dollars through periods of years to publishers because of love alone.

Advertising is a valuable aid in selling.

You remember the man who—if he had some eggs would have some ham and eggs if he had some ham.

If Royal or Ivory, Victor or Gold Dust could sell goods at less cost without advertising, they would rival the woodland violet and blush unadvertised.

In the long haul, the cost of sound advertising is absorbed by the economies in selling it effects.

22-STORY BUILDING FOR STOCK EXCHANGE

PROBABLE COST $3,000,000

Connects with Present Structure—Made Necessary by Increased Business—Wilks Building Leased.

As an addition to the New York Stock Exchange the officers announced yesterday that plans had been completed for erecting a twenty-two-story building on the entire Wall Street frontage between Broad and New Streets. While the cost was not stated, it will approximate fully $3,000,000 for a structure of that character in the heart of the city's financial district.

Although the present magnificent home of the Stock Exchange was opened in 1903, the expansion of its business in seventeen years has been so extraordinary that more room has been urgently needed for some time. By acquiring the Wall Street block front the Building Committee, of which William B. Potts is Chairman, states that the Stock Exchange will be enabled to increase its board room to meet the requirements of years to come.

The first seven floors of the new structure will be used by the Stock Exchange and the upper floors will be rented as offices. Owing to the high value of property in that centre the officers, after careful consultation, felt that in addition to providing necessary floor space for the Exchange arrangements should be made to obtain a reasonable revenue toward defraying the property and building costs and maintenance. The present Stock Exchange Building is equivalent to ten stories in height, and the addition will be an imposing structure adjoining and connected with it on the north.

The plans have been prepared by the architects, Trowbridge & Livingston. In general, the design follows the Corinthian order of the present exchange, of which the late George B. Post was the architect. Six tall Corinthian columns, somewhat similar to those on the Broad Street front, will adorn the Wall Street façade, rising from the second to the eighth floor, indicating the extension of the board room floor. The horizontal lines are arranged so as to bring together the different levels of the Broad and New Street fronts of the present building, while the superstructure, above the tenth floor, will be erected as a tower with two setbacks, the upper tower section being four stories in height.

Wilks Building Leased.

In providing for the new building the news was disclosed yesterday that the Stock Exchange on Jan. 1 last closed a lease for twenty years and four months with the Matthew Wilks estate for the old Wilks Building, on the southwest corner of Wall and Broad Streets. There are three renewals of twenty years each, giving the Exchange possession of the property under lease for slightly more than eighty years.

A novel feature of the construction plan is that the new building will be erected in two sections. As it would be impossible to carry on the work of the Exchange in less space than its present quarters, it was found impracticable to tear down even a small portion of the present building in order to provide for the entire addition. Therefore, it has been decided to erect one half of the tall addition on the Mortimer side first, providing temporary office quarters in the Wilks Building. When that is completed the executive offices will be transferred to the new building and the second half erected on the Wilks Building site.

For more than forty years the Stock Exchange has had what is virtually little more than an alley entrance on Wall Street to its big structure. Its former holdings on that thoroughfare had a frontage of but 14.7 feet midway between the Mortimer and Wilks Buildings. By its purchase of the former and long leasehold of the latter the Exchange now has a Wall Street frontage of 155.5 feet, of which 141.10 feet represents new property additions. Of this, 57 feet was supplied from the Mortimer Building and 84.10 feet by the Wilks Building. The latter also provides an additional frontage on Broad Street of 58.2 feet, which, added to the present 137.10 feet occupied by the Exchange there, gives a total Broad Street frontage for the new structure of 196 feet.

On New Street the Mortimer site gave 66.7 feet. The present Exchange has a frontage there now of 152.5 feet, and with the addition it will be increased to 218 feet.

Large Holdings of the Exchange.

This enormous plot makes the New York Stock Exchange one of the largest owners of valuable realty in the downtown financial section, the combined properties having an assessed valuation with existing structures of $8,000,000, of which $6,710,000 is land value. The present Exchange site is assessed at $4,100,000 for the land, and with the building at $5,200,000. The Mortimer Building site is assessed at $710,000, and with the building, prior to its demolition, $750,000.

The Wilks Building site has an assessed value of $1,900,000 for the land, and with the building a total of $2,050,000. The latter, being immediately opposite the Morgan banking house and the towering thirty-two-story structure of the Bankers Trust Company, is one of the most valuable corners in the financial zone. The property was purchased at various times from 1870 to 1884 by the late Matthew Wilks for $801,000. The immediate corner parcel when Mr. Wilks bought it, in 1882, contained only 508 square feet, and he paid $185,000 for it, averaging a trifle more than $330 a square foot, being up to that time the highest price paid for any parcel of Manhattan real estate. Soon afterward he erected the present building, nine stories in height, similar to the Mortimer Building. Both of these structures were among the pioneers of the so-called tall building construction at that time. They were well built, and through careful management have always been tenanted by firms which have played an active part in the financial history of the city.

The prime factor which led the Stock Exchange officers to acquire the entire Wall Street block for its addition was the need of more space for the trading floor, and the architects have utilized every available inch of space for enlarging the Board Room. The addition will provide more than 7,650 square feet, which will be connected with the present big room. The main entrance to the enlarged Stock Exchange Building will be at the corner of Wall and New Streets.

On the seventh floor of the addition the greater part of the Broad Street frontage will be combined with the Governors' Room. There will be a members' lounge on the Wall Street front, and additional dining rooms will be provided on the same floor. The building contract for the structure has been awarded to Marc Eidlitz & Son. Provision has been made for a safe deposit vault larger than the present one, and also for an extension of the Stock Clearing Corporation.

The Construction Committee appointed by the Governors who will have general charge of the work consists of William B. Potts, Chairman; Samuel F. Streit, Seymour L. Cromwell, William A. Green and Allen L. Lindley.

ation with Street Cleaning Commissioner Arnold B. MacStay, Police Commissioner Enright and other officials. After the conference the Mayor praised the work and said the real trouble was the shortage of men. He then announced that 1,000 patrolmen had volunteered to dig ice.

Commissioner MacStay said 18,215 men were at work yesterday and told of the co-operation of city departments in supplying volunteers. In reply to charges of private cartmen, who said they could not dump rubbish at the city dumps because of petty graft by city employes who demanded from 50 cents to $2 each, the Commissioner said that the charge was untrue. He said any men caught accepting graft would be discharged. There are plenty of scows at the dumps to receive the rubbish, he declared, in answer to private contractors who asserted that there were not enough scows.

As to the remarks of Fire Chief Kenlon concerning the additional fire hazard due to the impassable condition of the streets, Mr. MacStay remarked that if Chief Kenlon would send him some of the firemen on patrol duty at night he could use them at pick and shovel work.

"Both men and horses have been working continually since Dec. 16, and are now at the breaking point," he continued. "There are 300 men on the sick list today, and the terrific strain is beginning to tell on the horses."

Since the storm began on Feb. 4 the Street Cleaning Department has removed 500,000 cubic yards of snow, it was said yesterday. There are 20,000,000 cubic yards of snow to be removed.

Of the Third Avenue Railway system the 125th Street crosstown line was in complete operation yesterday. Traffic was opened to the Willis Avenue line, which comes from the Bronx and uses the 125th Street tracks. The Third and Amsterdam Avenue line was opened from Sixty-fifth to 162d Street, and shuttle cars were operated from Sixty-fifth to Forty-second Street. The Broadway and Tenth Avenue line was opened from Seventy-second Street to Times Square. In Forty-second Street the company used a "scarifier" or large harrow, which turns up the ice after it has been crushed by a heavy iron roller.

On the New York Railways system the following operation was reported: Lexington Avenue line, from Ninety-ninth Street to Twenty-third Street; Broadway and Seventh Avenue line, from Fifty-ninth to Murray Street; Fifty-third Street, from Seventh to Ninth Avenue; Sixth Avenue, from Fifty-ninth to Thirty-second Street. Tracks and conduits in Broadway, from Murray Street to Bowling Green, were cleaned out and passenger service was resumed on that stretch of track.

Residents of the Bronx fear that the heaps of garbage that have accumulated may soon become a menace to health. With all receptacles filled with garbage and ashes, householders in some parts of the Bronx have taken to dumping garbage in snowbanks. Conditions were reported to be bad in the congested sections, especially in the Italian quarter in 149th Street, known as "Frog Hollow," and along Washington and Claremont Avenues.

Some high school boys took advantage of the holiday and volunteered to shovel snow. Boys from Evander Childs High School in the Bronx were assigned to the Fordham section. Boys from Manual Training High School in Brooklyn were put to work in South Brooklyn, and boys from Erasmus Hall High School worked in Flatbush. Many boys from Bushwick High School and from the High School of Commerce also were at work. The schoolboys' pay is the same as that of emergency men, 50 cents an hour.

Business men continued to complain yesterday of the condition of the streets. J. A. Voice of the Pasbach-Voice Lithographing Company sent the following telegram to President LaGuardia of the Board of Aldermen:

"Regardless of cost, something should be done by you and your Board of Aldermen to relieve the condition of the New York City streets. Millions of dollars are being lost by all industries, and it is likewise affecting workmen, who must be laid off by reason of no transit facilities. Even if street cleaners are paid $4 per hour or over, it will be far better than the stoppage of industries."

Commissioner of Accounts David Hirshfield said yesterday that complaints reached him that taxicab drivers had taken advantage of the traffic conditions, charging as high as $6 for a ride of less than a mile in some instances. The Commissioner said the license of any chauffeur found guilty of profiteering would be cancelled.

Owing to the impassable streets about the Grand Central Terminal and Pennsylvania Station the luggage rooms have become clogged. It was reported that taxicab drivers were charging exorbitant prices to transfer trunks. A salesman at Grand Central said that taxi drivers asked him from $1 to $10 for taking a trunk to the upper west side.

The Street Cleaning Department will stop traffic today on the following streets: Fortieth, Forty-first, Forty-fifth, Forty-sixth, Fifty-third, Fifty-fourth, Sixty-fourth, and Sixty-fifth. When these streets are cleared they will be used as one-way traffic streets until traffic is normal.

The department will experiment today with several devices represented as being efficient in the removal of snow. One is a self-propelling nozzle which burrows its way into a snow pile by means of several streams of water. A steam shovel also will be tested.

WOOD SEES LEADERS LABOR'S GREAT NEED

Tells Lincoln Alliance at Cleveland Bulk of Disturbances Is Due to Alien Control.

FOR DEPORTATION OF REDS

Dr. Hill Says Alliance Plans a National Campaign to "Lincolnize America."

CLEVELAND, Feb. 12.—Observance of the birthday of Abraham Lincoln was featured here today by the conference of the Lincoln American Alliance, which ended tonight with a banquet at which Major Gen. Leonard Wood was the principal speaker. Various labor, business and university leaders discussed problems of reconstruction during the morning and afternoon sessions.

"We are especially interested today not only to pay our small tribute of honor to the memory of Lincoln," General Wood said, "but also in asking ourselves what we are to do in preserving and strengthening the Government which Lincoln maintained—the nation which Lincoln saved. There are many grave questions confronting us. We must build up and strengthen the spirit of national solidarity."

Speaking on Americanization General Wood declared we should pay closer attention to our immigrations than ever before. Vast numbers of these people who are non-producers in the cities would be valuable producers if we could get them into the country and scatter them among our agricultural population, he said.

"We must do what we can to give American labor American leadership. The great bulk of the disturbances which arise in labor troubles comes from alien leadership. We must take vigorous steps to deport the Red element.

"Ninety-five per cent. of American labor is square and wants to do right. We must do all we can to harmonize the relations between capital and labor, to insure labor good working conditions, good housing conditions and a wage which, with thrift and industry, will enable the worker to save."

General Wood urged that more attention be paid to our system of public education and agriculture, which "has been altogether too much neglected."

Other speakers included Henry Lane Wilson, former Ambassador to Mexico; Dr. John Wesley Hill, Chancellor, and Dr. George Hubbell, President, of Lincoln Memorial University.

"We are trying to spread the gospel of Lincoln, who stood for conciliation and co-operation in all lines of American endeavor," Dr. Hill declared. "Today's conference is the first of a series to be held in all sections of the country, for which we have adopted the slogan, 'Lincolnize America.'"

WOOD WILL FIGHT FOR JERSEY.

Separate Tickets for Delegates to Convention Decided Upon.

NEWARK, Feb. 12.—Managers of General Wood's Presidential campaign in New Jersey have decided to have a separate ticket in the State primaries in April for the election of delegates to the national convention, and have made a tentative "Big Four" of Attorney General John W. Griggs, former State Senator Austen Colgate, former Acting Governor William M. Runyon and State Treasurer William T. Read.

The selection of State Treasurer Read is accepted as an indication that former United States Senator Baird, Republican boss, is a Wood supporter. Former Senator Colgate long has trained with the anti-machine element in the party, and, with Griggs and Runyon, is known to favor Wood. A separate Wood delegate ticket in each Congressional District is expected.

The ticket may be changed after a dinner to be given by Edgar A. Knapp of Elizabeth at the Union League Club, New York, next Monday, at which some Wood adherents are to be made acquainted with Congressman Norman J. Gould, the Eastern manager of the Wood campaign.

STOLEN BONDS SOLD BY CHAIN OF 'FENCES'

Police in Widespread Search for Thieving Brokers with New York Connections.

STOCK EXCHANGE HELPING

Some Wall Street Loot May Be in Canada—Messenger Charged with Attempted Theft.

Admissions by four of the six men arrested in the last three days in conjunction with the plot to steal securities in the financial district aggregating $5,000,000 led the police yesterday to inaugurate a countrywide search for "fences" to whom criminals who have operated in Wall Street for two years are believed to have disposed of stolen securities valued at millions of dollars.

Detectives not only were assigned to make careful investigations of a number of so-called brokerage houses in this city suspected by the police of having received stolen securities, but also were instructed to co-operate with employes and officials of the Stock Exchange in an effort to trace stolen securities.

It was learned yesterday for the first time that on Wednesday afternoon Police Commissioner Enright and Deputy Police Commissioner Lahey, in charge of the detective division, held a conference with representatives of the Stock Exchange in which, it was said, the affairs of several suspected brokerage houses were discussed.

It is known that in confessions made by Joseph and Irving Gluck and Herbert and Rudolph Bunora, who, with "Big Bill" Furey, are under $100,000 bail each on suspicion of being concerned in the theft of $107,000 in securities from twelve brokerage houses in the city, the youths revealed that certain "fences in the financial district had branch offices in Washington, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, and Toronto, Canada, and that hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of stolen securities had been sent to those out-of-town offices to be pledged as collateral with banking institutions.

It was reported at Police Headquarters yesterday that detectives have been sent to Washington and Toronto to check up certain points in the stories told by the Gluck brothers and Herbert Bunora. It is known that Joseph Gluck gave the detectives the name of an alleged broker in Toronto whom Furey had mentioned to them as the man through whom he expected to dispose of the $5,000,000 in stolen securities which he had plotted to obtain through messengers in the financial district. Efforts to obtain the name of the man from the police yesterday were futile. One detective working on the case said that to give the man's name would greatly hamper the work of the police in trying to uncover stolen securities thus far unaccounted for.

It is known that the Board of Managers of the Stock Exchange recently have been seeking a scheme to prevent thefts of securities from messengers. It is understood that the officials of the Exchange have received much information from brokerage houses in other cities concerning certain firms known to have relations with suspected brokers in the city. That information, it was said yesterday, had been placed at the disposal of the police. The police of other cities, it was admitted at Police Headquarters yesterday, also have been in touch with the local police regarding the sale or pledging of stolen securities in their cities.

The sixth prisoner arrested in connection with the $5,000,000 plot was held in $20,000 bail when arraigned yesterday morning before Magistrate Harris in the Tombs Court. He gave his name as Harry Wolf, and said he lived at 910 Prospect Avenue, the Bronx. He was arraigned on a charge of receiving securities valued at $21,000, part of the securities stolen by Rudolph Bunora. Wolf admitted he bought the securities from Bunora, but declared he did not know they were stolen. Detectives Cooper and Newman, who arrested him at his home on Tuesday night, asked that he be held in $100,000, but the Magistrate said $20,000 bail was sufficient, as no proof was produced that the prisoner knew the bonds had been stolen.

Reports that "men higher up" controlled the operations of Furey and the other four men arrested Monday night were scouted yesterday by detectives working on the case. They said the Gluck brothers had been stealing bonds for some time before they met Furey and that the latter only formulated the plot for a big theft after he had hoodwinked Joseph Gluck into giving him an automobile, a diamond ring and $1,500 in money while posing as a Deputy United States Marshal.

"Furey is one of the strangest criminals in the country," the detective declared. "He has made a very good living preying on criminals under the guise of a detective, an internal revenue officer, a Deputy Sheriff, or a Marshal.

"This talk about politicians being concerned in these robberies is unalloyed bunk," continued the detective. "Furey is the type of Upper Tenderloin habitue who will represent himself or any of his acquaintances up there as the biggest men in the country. Furey told Murray Abramowitz, the young messenger who set the trap for him and the Gluck brothers, that several men they met at the Hotel Claridge were big politicians. That was only done to impress the boy with the belief that 'Big Bill' had a 'pull' with big politicians and could prevent the police from interfering with their flight to Canada after they had gathered up the $5,000,000 in securities. Those fellows he introduced as big politicians probably were some of the dressed-up wall flowers you see hanging out on Broadway every afternoon and evening."

Magistrate Harris also held Benjamin Wallach, 18 years old, of 3 Rutgers Street, in $1,000 bail on suspicion that he tried to steal $1,403 Wednesday from his employers, Prince & Whitely, brokers, at 52 Broadway. Detective Gilfallen informed the Magistrate that he received the money from L. Hartman, broker, at 41 Broad Street, for securities he was sent to deliver. When Wallach did not return to his employer's office on Wednesday night the detective was notified, and he arrested him at his home. He will be arraigned for examination on the charge tomorrow.

Amberg

The Law of Correspondence Individualized
Serves Your Business Without Ruling It

The Logical Amberg Plan Makes Filing Simple as A B C

EVERY business man can recall individuals who thought themselves efficient, but who merely proved officious. The same is true of ordinary filing methods. Seemingly effective in theory—in practice, they rule rather than serve.

And though such methods cost more to continue than to correct, office managers often fear a change may mean a revolution of organization. The Amberg Plan is so simple, its adoption doesn't upset routine and often requires no change of modern furniture equipment.

Practical Results of the Amberg Plan

Because the Amberg Plan gives but one logical place to file or find, anyone knowing the A, B, C's can find any filed record in an emergency. The confidence in your files the Amberg Plan creates, makes them a clearing house for reference. All alibis for filing in desk baskets and storing in files are abolished. Your files become a mechanical memory for all office knowledge that is a matter for black and white record.

Scientific Basis of the Amberg Plan

The Amberg Plan is founded on a law of Correspondence proved 99½% accurate. This law is based on the Amberg masterlist of 205,920 names whose proportion of occurrence is constant throughout business. The masterlist is the result of the analysis of millions of names and the study of name occurrence for more than half a century in over 75,000 Amberg filing installations.

Purely inventive ways of filing enforce arbitrary rulings and routine, increase in complication with time and put dependance more on memory than on filing mechanisms. This shows in needless coding, persistent misfiling, slow reference, mental confusion and loss of time and effort in the entire office.

Amberg Finds Law of Correspondence

Correct distribution is the keystone of reliable filing. In some form, the Amberg Company had invented and tried practically every method now in use to arbitrarily control filing distribution. Results showed that till the law governing distribution was known and understood, such efforts were merely blind groping, and that to obtain dependable filing, distribution problems must be provided for in advance. The application of the Law of Correspondence not only provides for but controls distribution. Amberg took seven years to find and prove this law.

The Amberg Plan Individually Applied

Amberg experience covering more than half a century has established that no two filing problems are ever identical. Few are even similar. It is in its individual application to your peculiarities of organization and business relationships that the Amberg Plan assures your having effective files. Provision for the volume of fileable matter developed by your buying, branches, agencies and chief accounts is the first step of the Amberg Plan. That, together with the application of the Law of Correspondence, gives you individualized files.

You can adopt the Amberg Plan at once without any commotion in your office. Asking Amberg how, will not obligate you or cost you anything.

THE stress of overwork and worry has exhausted them—worn them down; they are starving.

At least, such have been the recorded observations of thousands of physicians and of countless users of Sanatogen, among them Arnold Bennett, the novelist, who writes:

"The tonic effect of Sanatogen on me is simply wonderful."

and of Col. Henry Watterson, the noted editor, who writes:

"I do not believe I could have recovered my vitality as I have done, without Sanatogen operating equally upon the digestive organs and nerve centers."

SAY WORLD NEEDS IDEALS OF LINCOLN

PRAISE BY LABOR PARTY

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler Speaks at Republican Club Dinner at Waldorf-Astoria.

The birthday of Abraham Lincoln was celebrated yesterday with exercises in public schools and at many meetings. Americans of all political faiths joined in paying tribute to his memory.

Socialists, Labor Party men, Republicans, Democrats and Independents quoted scores of sentences and paragraphs from his speeches and letters reflecting his opinions on nearly every current question.

The newly-formed American Labor Party praised Lincoln as its founder. Socialists and radicals made speeches at the Rand School to prove themselves the true inheritors of the Lincoln tradition. His constant teaching of respect for law and order was emphasized at a dinner of the Republican Club at the Waldorf-Astoria. After contrasting Napoleon and Lincoln, whom he described as the two great figures of their century, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, in his address to the Republican Club, said:

"There are among us allies of Napoleon who do not wear military uniform and who do not bear arms. With stealthy tread and whispering voices they go about spreading the doctrine that liberty is dead; that men are bound by invisible chains, and that the law, together with the order which it preserves and the liberty which it insures, is a curse, not a blessing.

Summons Spirit of Lincoln.

"It is insinuated that the law is a manacle put upon human hands by those who would dominate through cunning rather than by conquest. All this is to pave the way for a new attack by the disciples of force and of world domination, although the methods are new and the declared purposes quite different. Their aim is an autocracy not of a monarch, but of a mob.

"These attacks on liberty are just as real and perhaps quite as daugerous as if made on open field of battle with cannon and machine gun and poison gas. To lead us to resist and to repel these new attacks, we summon the spirit of Abraham Lincoln. He knew, few men ever knew so well, that law has been made by free men to protect liberty and to hold open the door of opportunity by the doing of strict justice between man and man. He knew, few ever knew so well, that human liberty is as much in peril from the many as from the one. He knew, few ever knew so well, that obedience to law, respect for law when law is built upon the foundation of civil liberty, is the cornerstone of any form of civil society that is to endure.

"Napoleon was a great law-giver; but for him law was to establish and assure order upon a foundation of force. For Lincoln, law was to establish and assure order upon a foundation of freedom. The nineteenth century was the scene of two great combats over human ideals. The twentieth century is still young and has its history to make. Wise men will expect the old combat to be constantly renewed, for no Utopia is in sight. We must take sides with Napoleon or with Lincoln. The twentieth century Napoleon may be a Lenin or a Trotzky, and the twentieth century Lincoln may be born in some other land than ours, but the driving forces will be the same, the animating ideals will be the same. As the nineteenth century so in the twentieth, the world can not exist half despotism and half democracy. Either Napoleon or Lincoln must win. Every real American hearing in his heart the cry of threatened liberty, will re-echo the old war song, to which the Boys in Blue so cheerfully marched two generations ago: 'We are coming, Father Abraham, a hundred million strong.'"

Charles D. Hilles, President of the Republican Club, in introducing Dr. Butler said:

"In this fateful year of 1920, there rests upon every true lover of his country the solemn duty to devote to public affairs as large a portion of his time, talents and energy as may be required, to wrest all branches of the nation from the withering grasp of the greedy, blundering and incurably incompetent horde of deserving Democrats. The Republican Party was brought into being in order that the Union might be saved. It must be brought back into power in order that the nation may be saved, and it must begin the renaissance of the republic by driving from every stronghold the party of opportunism and sectionalism."

Congressman Julius Kahn of California, Chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, after praising Lincoln for making up a strong war Cabinet by appointing the strongest men of all parties to offices, was greatly applauded when he said:

"Only a great big man could do that. A man of small mind would probably have sought rubber stamps."

He also won approval when, arguing against American interference in foreign affairs, he gave a list of nationalities represented in large numbers in this country, and continued:

"These people have come here from all over the world, and whenever this country begins to interfere in boundary disputes in Europe or the affairs of other lands we threw apples of discord among the people of our own country."

Senator Wadsworth argued against the policy of continuing the enforcement of war measures, called for a reduction of Federal regulation, and said the Republican Party must find means to prevent the tieup of the railroads of this country by any methods in the future.

Labor Party Issues Statement.

The New York headquarters of the American Labor Party said in a statement:

"The ranks of labor in this country and the world over revere the memory of Abraham Lincoln. It bespeaks their faith in genuine freedom and democracy, in human nature and public officials, in the big-heartedness and greatness of conception of Americans, as typified by Lincoln. And in their name the American Labor Party wishes to add its voice.

"Black slavery was a curse and a falsehood on American soil. It did not stay put, but was ever encroaching on free soil. And then the struggle came, and four years of bloody strife settled it for all time. And Lincoln was our leader in ideas and commander in the fields.

"The people of this country at various times have given different names to that which is another curse and falsehood of our nation. They have called it the corporations, the monopolists, the money power, big business, the vested interests, Wall Street, the invisible Government, the capitalists. And these United States will never be truly free and a Government of the people until this curse is wiped out. Gradually, through the ballot and education, the Labor Party of the United States is organizing forces to this end.

Carrying Lincoln Spirit Forward.

"We are carrying forward the spirit of Lincoln. We have this honest and robust faith of the people back of us. We declare with the greatest President that 'this country belongs to the people who inhabit it.' For this do the masses celebrate in sacred manner the birthday and name of Abraham Lincoln.

Wreath Laid on Statue.

A wreath of roses was laid on the statue of Lincoln in Union Square at exercises by Laura B. Frisk, Chairman of the day, said:

"Patriotism is alive and vibrant in New York. The spirit of Lincoln is alive and the spirit of Roosevelt is alive, and no one save an advocate of Bolshevism and the red rag would think of the possible death of patriotism in New York after such an inspiring sight as we have seen here."

Lincoln's birthday was made the occasion of a solemn high mass of requiem for the members of the Police Department at the Church of St. Vincent Ferrer. Four hundred police officers and men, under Lieutenant Andrew Devery, marched from the Sixty-seventh Street Station to the church, where a draped casket, surrounded by candles, occupied the centre aisle, and represented the dead of the last year.

Captain X had taken with him a liberal supply of Pall Mall famous cigarettes (plain ends). By the time he landed they were gone.

"Over There" he couldn't have a favorite brand. But the cigarettes he was lucky enough to get had one feature that gave him a big idea. They were round and smoked freely.

Back in America once more the Captain came and gave us his idea,—a big idea. He suggested that we make Pall Mall cigarettes round in shape, loosely rolled and plain end—a cigarette that does not have to be tapped, squeezed or loosened, a cigarette with a free and easy draught.

RADICALS ANSWERED IN LINCOLN'S WORDS

Secretary Lane Applies Great President's Wisdom to Present-Day Conditions.

WOULD CURB WILLFUL FEW

And Would Want Council of Nations Assembled Now to Plan Disarmament.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 12.—The attitude Abraham Lincoln would have assumed toward problems now confronting America was discussed by Secretary Lane in an address tonight before the Philadelphia Lincoln Club:

"'When people today talk of revolution in the United States,' declared Mr. Lane, 'they meet an answer in the words of Lincoln who said: 'In a democracy where the majority rules by the ballot through the forms of law, physical rebellions are radically wrong, unconstitutional and are treason.'

"Lincoln believed that the supreme achievement of civilization, the climb that we have been making through 10,000 years, was the fact that the willfulness of the few had become subjected to the lawfulness of the many.'

"If Lincoln looked out upon the world and saw the sad state in which it is," said the Secretary, 'I am convinced he would believe that there should be a council of all the nations sitting in Europe at this very time planning for the disarmament of nations and for the restoration of the peoples, the League of Nations or no league. His great soul could not disregard the call of humanity, could not refuse the challenge of the occasion, could not see hope for America in a disordered world, and he would bear his part in lifting to their feet those who are in distress, whether friends or enemies.

"Surveying America with its continuous picture of a discontented labor, I am sure that he would hold that there can be no lasting economic life where the employed and the employer regard each other as enemies, where the philosophy of unending warfare is accepted as the shifting foundation of our industrial life, a plan of existence in which the women and the children of the workers, the mass of society, the public, are the supreme sufferers.

"He would regard it as the commanding duty of our time to find the way, the gradual expanding way, in which the methods of war—these methods of economic war—would be abandoned, and in their stead the way of a growing law be substituted.

"But the miracle of satisfying all, he would not attempt to work, for he put our situation clearly when he said: 'What's the matter with my two boys? Just what's the matter with the whole world. I have got three walnuts and each wants two.'"

LINCOLN'S MESSAGE TODAY.

Will H. Hays Says It Would Be "Don't Get Discouraged."

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Feb. 12.—Will H. Hays, speaking at a Lincoln Day Republican meeting on "What Would Lincoln Say Today?" said that recognition of his true greatness had been enhanced mightily throughout the world during the last few years. He continued:

"'There goes the spirit of Lincoln at the head,' ejaculated the Premier of England when he saw the advance guard of American soldiers sweeping forward over Flanders fields. And when the awful carnage ceased the foremost of living philosophers, gazing apprehensively into the troubled future, murmured, despairingly, 'What Europe needs now is a Lincoln.'

"If an Abraham Lincoln were and still may be the chief need of Europe, how much more surely should he be the guiding star of his own native land, the only land he ever knew, the only land he ever loved except as his great heart was filled with loving kindness for all mankind. We have not the man, but we have his spirit; we have his faith; we have his words:

"'History is the voice of God sounding across the centuries the laws of right and wrong.'

"'Eternal right makes right. As we understand our duty let us do it.'

A BAD RESERVATION MADE WORSE.

Is the American nation so fond of war that it will do nothing to prevent it? That would be our attitude toward war, and we should so proclaim it to the world, if the new reservation to Article X. of the Treaty were made a part of the act of ratification.

The history of this new reservation is complex and obscure. It is said to have originated in the compromise conference; the authorship of it is attributed both to the Democrats and to the mild reservationists; it is even said to have been the one that Senator HITCHCOCK submitted to the President, concerning which the President wrote a letter to the Nebraska Senator. Strangest of all, it was for a time accepted in Washington and elsewhere as differing in no important respect from Mr. LODGE'S reservation.

It is vitally different, for in the form now given to it the reservation declares that in entering the League we disclaim any obligation to employ any measures whatever to prevent war, unless in each case Congress authorizes the action taken, although some of the surest preventives of war prescribed in the covenant are not military in their nature and therefore bear no relation to the provision of the Constitution which confers upon Congress exclusive authority to declare war. Mr. LODGE'S reservation declared that the United States would assume no obligation to preserve the territorial integrity or political independence of any other country, or to interfere in controversies between nations "under the provisions of Article X., or to employ the military "or naval forces of the United States "under any article of the Treaty for "any purpose," save by the special authorization of Congress. The new reservation is as follows:

> The United States assumes no obligation to preserve, by the use of its military or naval forces, or by the economic boycott, or by any other means, the territorial integrity or political independence of any other country, or to interfere in controversies between nations, whether members of the League or not, under the provisions of Article X., or to employ the military or naval forces of the United States under any article of the Treaty for any purpose, unless in any particular case the Congress, which, under the Constitution, has the sole power to declare war, shall, by act or joint resolution, so provide.

The Lodge reservation was limited to military action taken under Article X., the new reservation is all-comprehending; it not only extends the exemption to Article XVI., relating to economic boycott, but in the words, "by any other means," releases us from the engagement to employ any measures whatever to safeguard the peace of the world. In agreeing under Article X. "to respect and preserve as "against external aggression the ter"ritorial integrity and existing polit"ical independence of all members of "the League," the nations were to have banded themselves together to prevent war, for external aggression and threats against national independence are the commonest causes of war. There was a safeguard provided not only in Article X., but one almost certainly as effective and capable of much prompter application in Article XVI., which we here quote:

> Should any member of the League resort to war in disregard of its covenants under Articles XII., XIII. or XV., it shall ipso facto be deemed to have committed an act of war against all other members of the League, which hereby undertake immediately to subject it to the severance of all trade or financial relations, the prohibition of all intercourse between their nationals and the nationals of the covenant-breaking State, and the prevention of all financial, commercial or personal intercourse between the nationals of the covenant-breaking State and the nationals of any other State, whether a member of the League or not.

That is not war, the economic boycott is not a military measure. Military, naval or air force would be used only on the recommendation of the Council to the several Governments, which each and every one of them would be free to accept or reject. But resort to the boycott would not, under the Constitution, require the sanction of Congress, and the requirement of the new reservation that Congressional sanction should in every case be necessary would practically annul Article XVI. by depriving it of the supreme virtue of prompt application. Note the language of the article. The members of the League "hereby undertake immediately to subject" the quarrelsome nation to the boycott. In alternate years, the Congress of the United States is ordinarily not in session from the fourth day of March to the first Monday in December. Under this reservation we should be cut off for nine months from joint action to prevent war, unless Congress were summoned to meet in extraordinary session. And were Congress assembled, months of debate might defer preventive action that, to be effective, must be taken "immediately."

It is hard to resist the belief that whoever prepared this reservation or inserted these nullifying clauses intended to make it practically impossible for the United States to conduct itself like a high-souled nation and a friend of peace as a member of the League. They have been an unconscionable time about it, but at last Senators not hostile to the Treaty begin to see what this reservation means; but even now they give strange explanations of its origin. It was not prepared to "save the faces of the Democrats" or for any other innocent purpose. It does not merely reduce the peace obligations of the United States to a minimum, it extinguishes them altogether.

FARMERS ON CLASS GOVERNMENT.

When organized labor is seeking help from the farmers in its efforts to secure class government and when the date of the strike ordered by a committee of the railway maintenance of way men is but a few days distant, there is a vital and national interest in the memorial to Congress drawn up by the conference, at Washington, of four great societies of farmers, the American Farm Bureau Federation, the Cotton States Board, the Association of State Farmers' Union Presidents and the National Grange.

Citing the obvious facts that the city people depend upon the farmers for food and that a strike of railroad unions or of other transportation workers would stop the food supplies of the cities, these representatives declare that believers in an "inherent right" of organized labor to strike believe that labor organizations "have "a right to starve the people of the "cities to death, on the one hand, "and to destroy the property of the "farmers on the other." There has been and there is and can be no such right. "No set of men has ever had "the moral or legal right to destroy "property or cause suffering by com"bining together, and the welfare of "all the people must ever remain su"perior to that of any class or group "of people."

With great cogency the farmers point out that if the farmers of the United States should strike, cutting off arbitrarily the supplies of the millions of the population that cannot produce food and clothing for themselves, they would be universally condemned. They have no right to strike although they own and occupy the land, and theoretically have a right to do what they choose with their own property. The moral sense of the community would revolt at such a strike. That we all feel sure of. Yet the strike of the railway workers, the closing of the arteries of communication, would be substantially the same cruel and unpermissible and unthinkable attempt of a class to starve and injure the majority of the people for the supposed benefit and aggrandizement of that class.

As a matter of fact, the railway men, demanding higher wages on account of the increased cost of living, are seeking to increase that cost. That would be the inevitable effect of granting their demand. But there is a far more momentous question than any temporary or even permanent financial loss, private or public, in the various recent manifestations of organized labor, political or economic. The American people will not be dictated to by a minority. The American people will not be dictated to by any man or men, any group or class of men. From autocracy, from aristocracy, from oligarchy to democratic equality, ordered freedom, representative government has been the path of progress. The American people will not submit to regression and reaction, to a return to a labor aristocracy or oligarchy.

Mr. DAVID F. HOUSTON, then Secretary of Agriculture, admirably stated the case of the American form of government against class government in an address made at Chicago last November:

> Democracy arose on the downfall of a class. Our forefathers did not want class rule. They deposed such autocrats as the Stuarts, the Bourbons, and their adherents who sought to tyrannize over the masses. There is no one class in society that has sense enough to rule all the others. Any one class would make a sad failure of governing this nation or any other. History teaches that lesson very plainly. I am in favor of improving our Government whenever the need for the improvement is demonstrated, but not of upsetting it. There will and must be changes, but these changes must be discussed and made according to the processes of law and of American life and institutions, and not according to the whim of some class.
> The American people are still committed to the theory of representative government, of government made up of representatives of all the people. I do not believe they will substitute for it representation of groups of interests, with the struggle on the part of each group to dominate; and I think that they will not accept the theory that employes of the Government, municipal, State or Federal, may strike to secure what they wish. I am unable to see how a group of individuals can claim the privilege of striking against the body politic without arrogating to itself the position of supremacy over the people.

Words of truth and soberness. Doubtless the majority of American labor unionists believe in the doctrines expressed by Mr. HOUSTON and by the representatives of the great organizations of farmers. It is a generous if mistaken loyalty to rash leaders, rather than belief in a conviction, that induces associations of workmen to consent collectively to policies which individually they wouldn't support.

PLEBISCITES.

The overwhelming victory of the Danes in the first plebiscite zone in North Slesvig—they cast 75,023 votes to 25,087 for the Germans—will please every one except those radical critics of the Treaty who think that self-determination means recognition of the German right to everything that Germany has ever stolen. But intrinsically it is not of great importance, for the only thing in doubt was the size of the Danish majority. This, indeed, is larger than had been expected, a fact which perhaps offers some evidence for the prediction of the result in the second zone, where the vote is to be taken on March 14; but ever since the Germans realized that they would have to make good on the promise of a plebiscite in North Slesvig which the Prussian Government made in 1865 they have counted this district as lost.

The Danish Government, supported by moderate sentiment among its people, prudently resigned claim to the third zone, where a plebiscite was provided in the original draft of the Peace Treaty; Denmark did not want too many German citizens, particularly since their presence would furnish some pretext for a possible German effort to recover all the lost territory. The second zone is to vote by communes, and the principal struggle is over the City of Flensburg, where the well-known methods of Prussianization drove Danish national sentiment pretty well under cover. It has reappeared since Germany was beaten, and here the Germans have been exercising their most vigorous propaganda. Yet the desire to escape war taxes may lead many Germans to vote Danish. The Treaty provides that Germans left within the Danish lines may within two years decide to retain German nationality; that within a year after doing so they must move to German territory; but that they may retain title to real estate held on the Danish side of the line and take all movable property with them.

Here is another chance for profit to the canny German. If he prefers to remain a German, he is not compelled to keep his real estate in Denmark; he can sell it, and sell it for kroner. The present rate of exchange would make many a modest real estate owner nominally a well-to-do man when he had changed his kroner into marks. The Germans on the spot seem for the most part to be thinking in terms of immediate personal interest rather than of national sentiment.

But, since the Kiel Canal is not to be definitely lost, the Germans have little but a sentimental interest in the disposition of Slesvig, despite their claims of unfairness and their talk of the impossibility of assimilating the German minority. There is no particular hostility to Denmark; above all, there is a firm conviction that if Germany ever wants to recover North Slesvig her superior strength will make it as easy as it was in 1864. The plebiscites in which the Germans take a keen interest are those in East Prussia and Upper Silesia. The ancient hatred for the Poles who would not turn German under the strongest pressure has been redoubled now that Poland is again a nation. In Upper Silesia the worst forms of terrorism were tried in the effort to frighten the Poles into giving up their national ideals. Violence has died away as the allied troops begin to come in, but the Germans will fight for their eastern frontier as hard as they can by whatever seems the most convenient method. The fate of Upper Silesia is much more important to the Germans and to the world than that of North Slesvig.

BRITAIN REJECTS THE SOVIET.

On the morrow of the day when the British Premier said "the danger is "not all in Russia; there is cause "for serious apprehension at home," he spoke more plainly. Debating the proposal of nationalization of the coal mines, LLOYD GEORGE said that what the miners really wanted was full control of the industry. Any attempt to convince the country by violence—"industrial action" is the new synonym for political strikes—would be a challenge to the whole fabric of free government. "We will fight it to the "death, because it would not be a "strike for wages and betterment of "conditions of employment, but for "the establishment of a Soviet, and "that would mean the end of constitutional government." The amendment was lost, 329 to 64. That does not fully disclose the weakness of the proposal, because labor polled nearly its full vote in half a house, and the absent half may be assumed to be in sympathy with the majority in about the proportion disclosed.

The interpretation of the debate is more important than the merits of nationalization. The Premier showed himself as much in favor of force against Bolshevism in England as against its use in Russia. He will trade with the foreign Soviets, but he will fight the domestic sort. He has a choice outside England, but at home he has no choice unless he can frighten his enemy out of fighting. The miners are reckless because they have nothing to lose after having inflicted almost incalculable loss on their country. British authorities reckon that the policy of the miners has reduced the British coal production by the equivalent of seven years' work, but that weighs for nothing with the miners. They are as united in support of their policy as the country is united against it. In the labor convention which adopted the policy it was said impatiently that it had been proposed forty-two times already, and the vote was affirmative 4,478,000 to 77,000 negative. The convention debate was practically a declaration of lack of confidence in the Government, abounding with charges of errors amounting to ignorance or worse. That is how it came about that the Premier had either to fight or to give in. It is to his credit and for the safety of England that he stood his ground.

His declaration that there was danger outside Russia is fit to be taken notice of in many countries, for more than Russia and England are threatened. At the Cleveland convention, which resulted in the coal strike, our United Mine Workers "demanded the "immediate nationalization of the "coal mining industry of the United "States." They are as impatient as the British miners, for they have proposed nationalization from time to time for twenty years. Our miners, like the British, are demanding shorter hours and higher pay, and "their share" of the profits of the operators, which are being so misrepresented, with the result of arousing envy, hatred and all uncharitableness. The railway workers support our miners as the British support theirs, and the Plumb plan for our railways is like the British plan for the mines in proposing the issuance of national bonds to cloak the expropriation. If the likeness should be carried through by a loss in our coal industry like that in the British, there would be a coal deficit which would make our railway deficit look trifling.

In 1919 the Canadian miners joined the organization of our miners and preceded them in demanding nationalisation. Even earlier, in 1918, France opened the way to nationalization of mines by limiting the life of such franchises. In Austria last year there was passed a law declaring that the German-Austrian Coal Mining Corporation was a "socialized" institution, and giving it power of expropriation. This is by no means a complete summary, but it suffices to show that there is Bolshevism outside Russia and that the adoption of a policy toward it is due. Nowhere are its advocates backward in manifesting readiness to use "industrial action" as an argument. There is plenty to say on the merits of nationalization, and it has been said so often, and with so little result, that now it is necessary throughout the world to consider a policy when the minority rejects the arguments of the majority and resists the Government.

UNITE THE PORT.

The injury resulting from the continued disunion of the Port of New York, though great and likely to become permanent, affects few persons in the daily affairs of life. It is perceptible chiefly to the commercial and constructive vision. Yet in that fact there is a force far more powerful than any accumulation of merely personal inconveniences. The Port of New York handles more than 50 per cent. of the entire foreign commerce of the United States—a commerce which is already, and is destined to continue to be, greater than that of any other nation. Its total of exports and imports is greater than that of any two other cities in the world. Yet the system of waterways which has given it this preeminence serves to divide as well as to unite its activities, and it suffers the further disadvantage of existing under the jurisdiction of two different and traditionally rival States. Efficiency in present administration and, far more than that, all genuinely constructive plans for the future depend upon uniting Brooklyn, Manhattan and the great commercial centres of New Jersey under a single authority—a commission that can search out all facts involved, evolve a plan for the co-operation of all steamship lines, railways and cities, and ultimately marshal resources sufficient to construct solidly for the future.

Rival ports have been active with tales of the expense of lighter and barge, of the hampering lack of co-ordination in port control. In numerous cases, and especially during the war, the New York Chamber of Commerce has found that these statements were grossly exaggerated. But in the absence of a responsible and well-informed authority they passed unchallenged. Ports to the south of us have been aided by giving them arbitrary preferential rates; freight was diverted from us in such large quantities that, even in the great crisis of the war, the Pennsylvania Railroad lines to this port were operating at only 80 per cent. of their capacity. Now these ports plead a vested interest in their expensive new docks and terminals and are fighting to retain a trade that was never rightly theirs. Because of a similar lack of enterprise in our port, streams of commerce are diverted from the Middle West to New Orleans and down the St. Lawrence.

New Jersey favors a union that means new life. In 1917 Governor EDGE said: "The interests of New "York are so closely related to the in"terests of Northern New Jersey that "there is absolutely no point of dif"ference. I want to see industrial "New York and industrial New Jer"sey co-operate, especially located as "they are with this wonderful har"bor." Governor WHITMAN shared his vision, and now Governor SMITH has risen likewise to a statesman's opportunity. The Chambers of Commerce on both sides of the Hudson are urging the union with their utmost persuasiveness. The only obstacle is in the inevitable complexity of the plan for constituting an authority. On both sides it is necessary to surrender a certain minimum of local control while yet the powers and scope of the authority must needs be undetermined. Meanwhile projects of expansion are under way which meet certain present needs, but are out of harmony with the great general plan. In a few days the matter will come up at Albany. Unless it is settled, and settled with courage and vision, the scheme for an effective co-operation between the two halves of the port will be made infinitely more difficult, perhaps impossible.

Much more is at stake than the future of the world's greatest harbor. The Port of New York is the portal of the American nation. To cramp it permanently is to lower for all time our national efficiency, in war as in peace.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Menace Hard to Exaggerate.

That New York City at any time of untoward circumstances as to wind and weather might have a conflagration not less in proportion to its size than those which more than once have swept away large portions of other American towns is a warning that has often been made by men speaking as experts with full knowledge of conditions existing here. That is the same as saying that, until a far greater part of this city than now is composed of slow-burning or fireproof buildings, it is constantly menaced by the possibility of a fire so widespreading as to create an appalling loss of property and of life.

Never has there been better reason than now for every New Yorker to keep these facts in mind, for never, perhaps, except during the blizzard of '88, and for a day or two afterward, has the efficiency of our Fire Department been decreased as it has been for the last week by the inability of its members to reach fires promptly. And it is upon immediate attack that the efficiency of even the best of Fire Departments depends.

As everybody knows, there is a moment after which a burning building cannot be saved, but what is not so well known, or at any rate not so well realized, is that there is also a moment after which there is little chance of stopping what is called a conflagration, as distinguished from a fire, until it has consumed everything combustible in the direction toward which a strong wind happens to be carrying it. Chicago, San Francisco, Boston and Baltimore are among the cities that have suffered from such uncontrollable disasters, still well remembered, and their losses were trivial in amount in comparison with those surely to be incurred here if a great fire once were well started with our streets as nearly impassable as the majority of them are today.

Unprepared for Great Emergencies.

In the presence of such a fire risk as has just been described, there are two things that New Yorkers can do at once—every one of them can use his utmost care and watchfulness in the protection of his own premises, residential and business, and he can do a little, if not toward clearing the streets of accumulated snow and ice, at least toward keeping them free of other obstructions wherever the clearing has been accomplished.

That is for the instant. There remains the larger task of creating and expressing an irristible public demand for action by the municipal authorities in the way of better preparation for dealing with Winter storms. Huge sums already are available for snow removal, but while money is, of course, essential for the performance of such work, money does not do it. For that there must be timely preparation for meeting emergencies which, though fortunately rare, have in them nothing of the unknown.

Most of our Winters have at least one heavy snowfall, and yet under this administration, as under most of its predecessors, a really big and hard storm finds the city unable to prevent a more or less serious, and more or less prolonged, interruption of its vital activities. Usually, as now, the chief dependence has been on casual labor, hastily gathered, in insufficient amount, and the result is that what could be removed with comparative ease as snow turns to ice or an approach to it and has to be assaulted with picks instead of shovels. New York is not peculiar, of course, in habitually arranging for ordinary rather than for extraordinary demands, but its interest as well as its pride should cause it to guard itself better than it does from such costly and humiliating experiences as those through which it is now passing—lucky, too, that the experiences are no worse.

More Than Excuses Are Offered.

It is characteristic of the New York Telephone Company—as of its parent corporation—that it now not only has excuses appreciably better than fairly good for its present frankly admitted failure to provide a service as good as it rendered in the past. That in itself would be enough to earn something of patience from patrons contending with delayed calls and wrong numbers, but better than excuses for bad service is the company's announcement that it has appropriated $38,000,000 for the renovation and extension of its facilities, and that it confidently hopes within a year or a year and a half to be able to provide a service at least equal to that of other, happier days.

Incidentally, whoever feels moved to rage against the telephone company when his line works ill or not at all, with perfect justice could turn his denunciations in another direction. That is, let him say to himself, "Of these ills, too, Germany is really the cause and on her should rest the blame."

For true it is, certainly, that if Germany had not been discontented with honestly earned prosperity, and if, like a Highland clan in the fifteenth century, she had not started out to raid and rob her neighbors' lands, our telephone service would be today even better than it was in the happy years before 1914, when it was admittedly the best in the world.

His Offer Passes Unnoticed!

How astonishing it is that the Allied Powers have not made any reply to the offer of the young—though not so very young—man who once was heir apparent to the German crown to take upon his own shoulders all of the responsibility they purpose, or propose, to divide among some eight hundred lesser representatives of Teutonic militarism. That is, how astonishing it must be to the sometime Prince himself.

He made what in his own estimation as in that of his Dutch friends and admirers was a "beautiful gesture." It will not occur to him or to them that it was true German tact he illustrated when he presented himself as the "victim" he assumed the Entente wanted and insisted on having. Of course the use of that word by necessary implication charged the Allies with unreason and bloodthirst in meditating the infliction of punishment on any German for acts committed during the war. He never dreamed they would mind a little thing like that, and still less did he expect them to fail to see in him a "victim" of such enormous importance that all thought of seeking others could be abandoned.

In this view, apparently, the young man's father agrees, for it is reported that a parental order not to surrender has been issued. That hardly would have been done had the ex-Kaiser not deemed it likely, or at least probable, that the offer of the ex-Prince would be accepted. Therein are they both amusing—almost. They still have so much to learn! And neither is learning anything at all!

"STORM TROOPS."

Where Are the Volunteers for the "Moral Equivalent for War"?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

What better time than the present—the regular city organization having shown its helplessness in the face of a not extraordinary storm—to mobilize some of that unused strength and willingness considered by William James in suggesting his "moral equivalents for war"? Professor James, writing at a time when few suspected that a world war was imminent, and with the theory that men crave from time to time the sort of emotional earthquake that war brings, thought substitutes might be found in a greater socializing of exciting and hazardous work. Set the sedentary fire-eaters to catching fish off the Grand Banks in midwinter, tossing red-hot rivets on the fortieth stories of skyscrapers, and so on.

There must be twenty or thirty thousand able-bodied men in New York who for exercise or adventure would be delighted to turn to and clean up their town of snow. Whether they should be mobilized by districts, streets or blocks is a matter of detail, but there must be some way of breaking through a great city's ridiculous impersonality, as a result of which fifty strong men will gaze down from their apartment or office windows at fifty square feet of snow, as helpless, apparently, as if they were chained to the wall. I speak not without facts, as I know of at least three amateurs, including the present writer, who joined the Street Cleaning Department on Sunday, much to the advantage of their personal health and somewhat, let us hope, to that of the city as well.

This whole matter of dirty streets—I am thinking of the streets before the snow rather than since—comes home to me with peculiar painfulness after having spent a good part of the Summer in Helsingfors, the capital of Finland, a city whose streets are as noticeable for their spotlessness as New York's have lately been notorious for their filth. The Finns were literally starving a year ago. They are struggling now with a rate of exchange so grotesque that it is only with great difficulty that they can pay for the necessary imports from abroad. Yet the Finns, with only a tiny fraction of New York's wealth and resources, contrive to keep all their streets big and little, as clean as well-kept tennis courts.

A Finnish emigrant arriving in New York before the recent snow and walking through almost any of the supposedly fairly polite streets between Fifth and Sixth Avenues would inevitably conclude that he had arrived among a people with a civilization inferior to his own. So far as municipal cleanliness is concerned, he would undoubtedly be right.

ARTHUR RUHL.
New York, Feb. 9, 1920.

"GRAY MANHATTAN TOWN."

Green trees, gay gardens, smell of spruce and pine,
Salt seas whose silvery horizons shine,
Curved mountains capped by clouds remote, serene,
The April Earth in seemly bridal green,
All these are precious, yet my heart slips down
From peaks of dream to gray Manhattan town.

In little parks the naked Winter trees
Are etched like slender silver broideries:
On roof and porch and tower snow gleams white,
An ermine scarf flung o'er the breast of Night;
And through a blurred sweet darkness, gold and brown,
I glimpse the face of dear Manhattan town.

I hear a song, a wild sweet lullaby,
As winds blow chill from wastes of sea and sky;
The music slips to minor, now it trills
As softly as some brown brook in the hills,
And always as the dusk is folding down
I love it most, my gray Manhattan town.

Its streets are full of tragedies and tears,
Its songs recall dear ghosts of golden years,
Its very beauty has a hint of strain,
Its haste a subtle prophecy of pain . . .
And yet, dear God, however desolate
My spirit be, however mocked by Fate,
Give me my city's dust, its pride, its pain,
Its fairy snow and slanting silver rain,
Its lofty turrets, smoke-wreathed, misty, dim,
Its springing spires of churches, pale and slim,
Its biting winds that from two rivers blow,
Its huddled, crowded houses, row on row,
For even in God's Heaven I would lean down
To see those roofs of gray Manhattan town!

ELIZABETH NEWPORT HEPBURN.

NEW ENVOY TO HOLLAND.

President Names William Phillips, Now Assistant Secretary of State.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—William Phillips, Assistant Secretary of State, has been selected to fill the vacancy in the post of Minister to The Netherlands and Luxemburg, caused by the resignation of John W. Garrett of Maryland, who returned to this country in July. Mr. Phillips is now in London on a personal mission due to illness in his family.

In the Spring of 1908 Mr. Phillips was designated as Chief of the Division of Far Eastern Affairs, and early in 1909 he was appointed Third Assistant Secretary of State. Late that year he was appointed Secretary of the American Embassy at London, where he served until his retirement from the diplomatic service in the Fall of 1912. President Wilson brought him back to the State Department in March, 1914, when he appointed Mr. Phillips to his former position of Third Assistant Secretary of State, a position he filled until he was recently made the Assistant Secretary of State at the same time that Frank L. Polk was made the Under Secretary of State.

UNITY IN WELFARE WORK.

New York Institute Formed to Co-ordinate Various Activities.

The formation of the New York Institute, an organization intended to co-ordinate the activities of various unofficial bodies engaged in public work, was announced yesterday. The organization, which has offices at 70 Broadway, purposes, according to the prospectus, to unite the forces of civic, social, and church agencies for public service, as charitable organisations are now co-ordinated by the Charity Organization Society.

The prospectus gives the following list of counsellors: Mrs. Richard Aldrich, the Rev. Dr. Peter Ainslie, the Rev. Dr. Alfred W. Anthony, George Gordon Battle, Robert S. Brewster, Bishop Charles Sumner Burch, the Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, the Rev. Dr. G. A. Carstensen, Dr. Henry K. Carroll, Robert Grier Cooke, Bishop John H. Darlington of Harrisburg, Cleveland H. RECTOR BALKS AT KILTIES.

Halts Movie in Parish House and Will Be Own Censor Hereafter.

PORT CHESTER, Feb. 12.—The Rev. Dr. Harry B. Heald, rector of St. Peter's Episcopal Church here, decided this afternoon to become his own movie censor. An entertainment was in progress in the parish house of his church and there was flashed on the screen a film which the clergyman had borrowed from a local theatre when one ordered for the occasion failed to arrive.

Suddenly there appeared the animated figures of some burlesque actresses clad in Highland costume. The minister hurried to the operator's booth and the picture faded out, never to return. Then he explained that he had not seen the film in advance and promised the affair would be resumed at another date with pictures of which he had witnessed an advance showing.

Last November the rector and his wife withdrew their names from the list of patronesses of a society benefit performance because he objected to the costuming of some of the amateur actresses and was shocked that others appeared with bare legs and knees.

FOR CHURCH WELFARE WORK

Dr. McDowell Says They Must Develop Effective Social Service.

The churches should dig deep into the problems of social service and should exercise consistent, painstaking, intelligent effort toward its development along effective lines, the Rev. Dr. John McDowell told the Commission on Interchurch Federations of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America yesterday at a meeting in the Hotel Pennsylvania. Dr. McDowell, Social Service Secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions, said he did not want such service monopolized by "short-haired women and long-haired men."

Fred B. Smith, former head of the men and religion movement, said church people had a great duty "in the matter of counteracting the deplorable state of mind that exists right now with regard to war. He said he recently heard a speaker tell the Chamber of Commerce "what we want is war with Mexico, and when it comes we'll settle this cattle question, and we'll get the oil wells down there, too."

The Rev. Dr. Alfred William Anthony asked that the term "inter-racial" be used in lieu of "international" for the federation.

DR. VAN DE WATER RESIGNS.

St. Andrew's Veteran Rector Goes to Church of the Beloved Disciple.

Van De Water has resigned, and next Sunday will preach his first sermon as rector of the Episcopal Church of the Beloved Disciple, at Eighty-ninth Street, near Madison Avenue, to which he was recently elected.

Dr. Van De Water presented his resignation at a meeting of St. Andrew's vestry last Wednesday. He had been asked to continue as rector of St. Andrew's but declined to do so, as he was in favor of St. Andrew's selling its property and the congregation merging with that of the Church of the Beloved Disciple.

BARNARD CAMPAIGN STARTS.

John Drinkwater Speaks at Opening of $500,000 Drive.

A campaign for a permanent endowment fund of $500,000 was launched yesterday afternoon at the annual Alumnae Day celebration exercises at Barnard College. John Drinkwater, author of "Abraham Lincoln," was the principal speaker and gave an address on the character and influence of Lincoln.

The keynote of Mr. Drinkwater's address was an appeal for the strengthening of an intellectual alliance between the English-speaking nations and a concentrated effort toward a better understanding between England and the United States.

The undergraduate assembled in Millbank Hall and marched to Students' Hall, where the meeting was held. Mrs. Paul Achilles, President of the Alumnae Association of Barnard College, presided, and announced that Mrs. Ogden Reid, an alumna of the school, had given $5,000 to start the campaign. Mrs. George Haven Putnam, former Dean of Barnard College, also made an address. Dean Virginia Gildersleeve announced that Mrs. Helen Hartley Jenkins would present to the college an ornamental gateway to Students' Hall as a memorial to her daughter, Helen Hartley eJnkins Geer, a graduate of the class of 1915, who died recently.

PICKS J. B. PAYNE TO SUCCEED LANE

President to Nominate Shipping Board Chairman for Secretary of the Interior.

HE MAY FINISH SHIP SALE

Declares Opposition Cannot Stop Auction—Stevens Mentioned to Head Board.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—John Barton Payne, Chairman of the United States Shipping Board, has been chosen by President Wilson to succeed Franklin K. Lane as Secretary of the Interior. The nomination of Judge Payne would have been sent to the Senate today, but that body was not in session late enough to receive the nomination.

Although Judge Payne has been closely associated with the Administration since October, 1917, the news of his selection for the Cabinet post came as a complete surprise. Former Senator Shafroth of Colorado had been most spoken of for the vacancy, but this was purely speculative.

Judge Payne said that he would accept the portfolio but would remain with the Shipping Board several weeks, for one reason to carry out the proposed auction of the former German liners next Monday. According to Judge Payne, despite strong efforts by William Randolph Hearst and Phillip Manson of the Pacific and Eastern Steamship Company, the sale will proceed as announced. Shipping Board officials said they did not believe that an injunction against the sale could be obtained in the courts.

The Chairman confirmed the recent statement that the Shipping Board had been forced to cancel many of its sailings because of the condition of foreign exchange.

Judge Payne said this afternoon:

"I will accept this Cabinet position—should I be confirmed—simply because the President has named me. I am afraid my heart is in the Shipping Board. There shall be no change in that. I have asked the President to continue me here until the present program is so far along that my successor will find a fairly clean slate. This will take perhaps a couple of weeks. It will include the sale of the German ships, reorganization plans and one or two other things."

The resignation of Secretary Lane was announced for March 1, and it is presumed that it will be some time during March that Judge Payne will take office. Much speculation was indulged in this afternoon as to his successor as Chairman of the Shipping Board. There was a belief in some quarters that Raymond B. Stevens would be promoted to the Chairmanship.

Judge Payne was born in Virginia in 1855, and practiced law in that State and West Virginia until 1883, when he removed to Chicago. He is now senior member of the Chicago law firm of Winston, Payne, Strawn & Strawn. He became general counsel of the Shipping Board in October, 1917, and went to the Railroad Administration as general counsel in January, 1918. After Edward N. Hurley left the Shipping Board Judge Payne was appointed to succeed him.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12, (Associated Press.)—While White House officials declined confirmation, it was understood that former Senator John Franklin Shafroth of Colorado had been offered the Chairmanship of the Shipping Board to be vacated by Mr. Payne.

Representatives of the National Council of Shipyard and Navy Yard Workers of the United States called upon Chairman Payne today, asking that the board discontinue the cancellation of shipbuilding contracts in order to encourage shipbuilding in America.

In reply, the Chairman said that the board would complete its program of contracts let before the armistice, with such cancellations as it considered necessary, and would grant allowances which would enable the shipbuilders to complete the vessels for their own accounts.

Contracts for the construction of three ships by the Toledo Shipbuilding Company were canceled today, but the company was allowed the materials on hand, payments already made, and $200,000 in cash, which made the total allowance equivalent to $600,000.

DENOUNCES SHIP SALE.

Mayor Thompson Says We Need Americans at Washington.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—Sale of thirty seized German ships for $28,000,000 as proposed by the Government is "only a fresh example of the policy of supine indifference to American interests of the present national Administration," Mayor William Hale Thompson declared in a statement issued today.

"Galling as this proposal must be to honest American pride," the statement reads in part, "it is when viewed in its proper perspective in these days of anglomania, relatively insignificant compared with the big deal in which it is attempted to sell the whole nation through the covenant of the League of Nations, taking from us our sovereignty. What we need is to have Americans in Washington."

LODGE IGNORES JASTROW.

Refuses to Reply to Psychologist's Attack on His Theories.

Sir Oliver Lodge last night refused to reply to Professor Joseph Jastrow of the Department of Psychology of the University of Wisconsin, who in a lecture on Wednesday criticised Sir Oliver's lectures as a menace to the mental health of the public. Professor Jastrow objected to the use of the prestige of the English scientist to spread what he characterised as "unwise and unscientific impressions" in explainnig apparent violations of physical law by attributing them to the agency of spirits.

"I don't want to take any notice of Professor Jastrow," said Sir Oliver last night at the Hotel Biltmore. "I have heard about him. He is opposing the whole subject. He is, of course, quite within his rights in doing so, but I do not want to take any notice of him."

PALM BEACH VENETIAN FETE

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 12.—A Venetian fête at the Everglades Club tonight was one of the smartest affairs of the season, the clubhouse, of Spanish architecture, set in a tropical garden on the shore of Lake Worth, lending itself well to Venetian decoration and soft lighting effects. CARUSO HAS A COLD.

Unable to Sing in "Marta," "Rigoletto" Is Given with Hackett.

Mr. Caruso for the first time in four seasons, it was said, took cold yesterday and missed a sold-out performance at the Metropolitan last evening. A holiday night audience accordingly did not hear "Marta," for which some hundreds had stood in line for hours, but instead greeted with apparent acceptance an Italian favorite, "Rigoletto," with the tenor rôle sung by Charles Hackett.

It was instructive to observe how one good old opera cast could be transformed into another as easily as changing a coat. Mme. Barrientos, Mr. DeLuca and others followed the songs of the wicked Duke of Naples as cheerfully and melodiously as they might have done the admired tophotes of the love-sick Earl of Derby; Mr. Bodanzky conducted, and everybody was satisfied.

A special matinée of "Aida" filled the Metropolitan's day, the afternoon assembly hearing a cast in which Mme. Matzenauer sang Egypt's princess, Miss Muzio, the royal African slave; Mr. Amato, the Amonagro; Messrs. Crimi, Martino, d'Angelo, and others completing the galaxy under Moranzoni's direction.

JULIUS CHAMBERS DIES OF PNEUMONIA

Editor Who Started Paris Edition of New York Herald Was Ill Only a Few Days.

NOVELIST AND DRAMATIST

Once Managing Editor of The World —Explored in 1873 the Head Waters of Mississippi River.

Julius Chambers, author and editor, who established the Paris edition of The New York Herald for James Gordon Bennett in 1887, died early last night after an illness of several days of pneumonia, at his apartment in the Hotel Clendening, 202 West 103d Street. Only a few hours before he died the column "Walks and Talks," written by him for sixteen years, appeared as usual in The Brooklyn Eagle.

Mr. Chambers had an exceptionally varied and interesting career as a newspaper man. He was born at Bellefontaine, Ohio, in 1847, and as a boy worked as a printer's devil in the office of a local paper. He was graduated from Cornell in 1870 and went to work on The New York Tribune under Horace Greeley. Three years later he joined The Herald, with which paper he made his reputation, serving Mr. Bennett in many capacities, from reporter to managing editor.

He and Mr. Bennett got on well together, though the owner put Mr. Chambers to a characteristic test. Summoning him to his sanctum one day he announced:

"It is now 3 o'clock. As an evidence of my appreciation of your work at Washington and Long Branch I shall ask you to take the managing editor's desk at 4 o'clock."

Mr. Chambers "took the desk at 4 o'clock" and, except for his absence in Paris, did not give it up till three years later, in 1880, when he left The Herald to become managing editor of The World.

Among the picturesque incidents of his newspaper life were his capture of the Blaine sensation in Milan during a vacation trip in 1889, when he went to bed, pretending to be ill, and got the story from the unsuspecting Dr. Forquet, Blaine's physician. While on The Tribune he had himself locked up in the Bloomingdale Insane Asylum and learned facts that he later published with resulting reforms in the State lunacy laws. In 1873 he started out an expedition to explore the head waters of the Mississippi, and discovered Elk Lake, Minn., since officially recognized as the source of the river.

HAYMARKET FAULTLESS BOWS TO ALLFIRE SUPREME AT WESTMINSTER DOG SHOW

ALLFIRE SUPREME BEST BULL TERRIER

Colors of Haymarket Faultless, Best Dog in 1918 Westminster Show, Dip to Rival.

JUDGING GOES WITH RUSH

O. C. of York Rated at Head of Airedales, Beating Noted Polam Maxim —Holiday Crowd on Hand.

Holiday crowds and the holiday spirit gave a tremendous impetus yesterday to the Westminster Kennel Club Dog Show at the Grand Central Palace, and there was real excitement on all three floors of the huge building from early morning until late at night. The judging went with a rush, every one of the rings attracting a dense fringe of spectators, and a number of the late decisions of the previous day were publicly posted for the first time, so that every one could find out the exact standing of the favorites.

Yesterday marked the important decisions in such traditionally popular classes as the Pekingese, the wire-haired fox terriers, the Airedales and the bull terriers, and all along the line there was material for hot discussion. One of the most significant decisions of the day came in the morning, when T. S. Bellin, judging the bull terriers, placed champion Allfire Supreme ahead of the Canadian thoroughbred, champion Haymarket Faultless, which two years ago was adjudged the best dog in the Westminster Show. There were minor sensations in the Pekingese, Airedale and other terrier classes, but the meeting of the two great bull terrier champions was the real event of Lincoln's Birthday, so far as the dog show was concerned.

Winner and Loser Imported.

While R. H. Elliott's bull terrier was eliminated from consideration for a renewal of the top honors that were his in the past, he bowed to a splendid specimen of his breed, a dog that the experts picked last season as a comer, and that has made good in spectacular fashion all year. Champion Allfire Supreme is the property of Commander J. Spencer Eddy, who is now in Paris, and entered under the name of the Little House Kennels. Both the winner and his closest rival are imported English dogs, and both made a wonderfully fine impression in the ring as well as on the bench.

This winning bull terrier had gone through half a dozen earlier shows of the year of such importance as Newport, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, and Pittsburgh, with the consistent record of being the best of his breed, and on three occasions, in Providence, Boston and at the Hudson County Show, he had been declared the best of all the breeds entered. He was shown yesterday by Tom Lynch of Westwood, N. J., the most experienced handler among the veterans of the metropolitan district.

There was a decided difference of opinion among the spectators yesterday as to the respective merits of the two champions, Haymarket Faultless and Allfire Supreme, some arguing that the former "best dog" still had the edge. Close observers, however, remarked that he had developed a little too much in the cheeks, and it may have been this soft extra flesh that lost him the winner's decision.

Breeding of the Victor.

The victorious dog is a son of Champion Allfire Alive, out of Wildfire Risky, and was bred by W. H. McCausland. After landing the winner's dogs the champion Allfire Supreme completed his triumph by being declared the best bull terrier in the show, the female honors having gone to champion Chariwood Ariel, owned by Floyd E. Waite, the Mayor of Cleveland.

A new dog in the bull terrier class that attracted the attention of no less an authority than the actor, William Faversham, was the 13-months'-old Towns Foremost, owned and shown by William H. Towns of Grantwood, and starting his career by being placed in both the novice and American-bred classes.

The early morning hours saw the finish of the judging of the Airedale terriers, with the largest entry list in the show, 104, making the judging by Judge W. P. Wolcott on the previous day, and here, also, a surprise awaited the prompt arrivals. That fine little Airedale, champion Polam Maxim, must have decided by this time the female of the species is more deadly than the male, for yesterday, for the second time this week, he was beaten by one of the opposite sex. In Tuesday's special show of Airedale Club it was Theodore Offerman's Almonte Peggy that was conceded the best of the breed, and yesterday it was O. C. of York, owned by J. R. Beard, that took a fall out of the champion. Almost as sensational was the advance of the puppy Mystery Marchioness to reserve in the winners' class.

More Laurels for Wycollar Boy.

There was lots of competition among wire-haired fox terriers, another popular breed called out in the morning hours of the holiday, Mrs. Roy A. Rainey, after a slow start, wound up gloriously in this class by taking the open and winners' dogs with her champion Conejo Wycollar Boy, a dog formerly owned by the Duchess of Newcastle, and the son of the famous champion, Wire Boy of Paignton. This great little specimen showed in perfect condition, and attracted favorable attention every moment that he was in the ring.

Up on the third floor the kingdom of the toy dogs yesterday turned over the judging ring to the royal line of the Pekingese, and it was a pleasure to see the new Canadian judge, Dr. Norman K. Swire, at work. He is a veterinarian by profession, and his handling of the Chinese dogs showed that he knew the most direct road to a physical appraisal, and particularly that he would not admit any unsound animal to consideration. Here the hopes of American breeders centred in the entries of Mrs. Grace Jackson of the Lladuck Kennels, Bound Brook, N. J., and her Pekes proved the only home-bred specimens to score. She did well to win the novice dogs with Lo Sankee, with she placed Chu Sin, Nelii of Alysdale and Boo Peep in the female classes.

The Yankibourne Kennels, however, ran off with the big honors among the canine chrysanthemums with their great octet of imported entries. The winning dog was the red sable champion Chung Chang of Alderbourne, with the particolored Rex of Glenlyon reserve. Champion Cumbala Cee Mee cleaned up on the feminine side, with Felicie of Alderbourne reserve. Not for nothing are these proud little Chinamen kept in luxurious silk-lined pagodas.

Expensive Peke Is Beaten.

There was some surprise over the defeat of the recent $6,000 importation, Shunnie of Alderbourne, in the Pekingese class, the reserve among the winners in the special Peke Show, which yesterday, after taking the open dogs not over eight pounds, was completely smothered and finished nowhere. A few whispers of "unsound" were heard at the ringside. Mrs. Howell Wooley's Kuanti of Alderbourne was also well liked by the crowd, and might possibly have displaced the reserve dog on the strength of bone and head. Alcelia's Song-Kol of Llenrud seemed a trifle overlooked on the female side, showing a head, front and coat that had some logical claims to a reserve in winners. But the twenty years' experience of Judge Swire in breeding Pekes speaks for itself, and his awards were generally approved.

American breeders did far better in the class for Sealyham terriers, landing both winners, and defeating such fine importations as Champion Hadley Hood-wink and Champion Birkdell Bess, the entries of W. Ross Proctor of the Brookwood Kennels, who originally bred these dogs in Wales, where he hunted them in packs. Considering that the Sealyham was introduced in America only about six years ago, the showing of these compact business-like little dogs at the Palace is most gratifying.

Coats Not in Prime Condition.

In justice to the two beaten champions it should be said that they were not in the best of coat yesterday. The winning dog, Barberryhill Gin Rickey, will be remembered as the "best of the opposite sex" in the big show of the Bronx Kennel Club last Fall, and he still attracts the crowd as he did then by the sparkling personality that makes good his name.

Attention was drawn yesterday also to the Dandy Dinmont terriers owned by Alfred B. Maclay, from the Killearn Kennels of Milbrook, N. Y. These dogs have been found valuable hunters in forcing game to break cover, particularly the giant German hares that abound in that neighborhood. (No. Buddie, not the kind you chased out of the Argonne Forest). The first dog to reach a championship in this year's Westminster Show is Donald Sherwood's female French bull, Princess d'Or, one of the smallest in her class. She completed her fifteen points yesterday morning by landing the winners among her sex, and the circumstance was made the more notable by the fact that the male winner, Bauer's Pompey, was an unusually large specimen of the breed. Evidently the judge of this class had no preconceived ideas as to consistency of type.

Today there will be more activity in the toy classes, and the general judging should be largely completed. Already the gossip is beginning as to possible candidates for the honor of "best dog in the show," and with one big favorite already eliminated all kinds of guesses are being hazarded. This distinction, perhaps the most coveted in all dogdom, has generally been limited to a few classes, chiefly the more popular breeds of terriers, all of which are unusually well represented this year. Tomorrow the important decision will be made after every dog in the show has been accurately placed among those of his kind. It is already established that the competition will be the closest on record.

Haymarket Faultless Meets Defeat.

The judging of the bull terriers by T. S. Bellin, the veteran judge of this breed, and in which competition Champion Haymarket Faultless, best of the show two years ago, met defeat, attracted the largest gathering of the day on the second floor of the Palace. After disposing of the earlier classes Mr. Bellin finally came down to Haymarket Faultless and Allfire Supreme, owned by Commodore Spencer Eddy.

Mr. Bellin spent much time in making his decision and made a careful inspection of both dogs. Several times he placed them side by side and tried to decide between them. Both dogs had been set down in remarkably fine condition. As this contest went on it became evident that Allfire Supreme was commanding more attention from the spectators than had been expected in his showing against such a noted champion. They were about equal in appearance and conformation. Mr. Bellin finally decided to make his decision on the basis of the snap and agility of the dogs. Haymarket Faultless was sent out into the ring to make his final bid for the honors, but in his jog around the ring he failed to show the fine spirit that prevailed with Allfire Supreme and the honor went to the latter.

Champion Charlwood Ariel, owned by Floyd E. Waite, Mayor of Cleveland, was the winner in the bitch class, while Champion Norosse Radiant was held in reserve.

Some of the keenest competition of the entire day with any of the many breeds was witnessed in the classes for Boston terriers. The judges faced a long task in reaching the final awards despite the speed they made in their selections. There were 185 entries in the various classes and 141 actual dogs passed before the eyes of the judges. The competition was strong in each of the classes, but toward the end it became evident that the eventual winners would be hard to beat.

Coast Dog Best Boston Terrier.

The Pacific Coast and far-away Texas provided the winners in this breed. The winners dog was Arroyo Arbitrator, owned by Freeman Ford of Pasadena, Cal., who made the trip across the continent to show this winner at the Grand Central Palace. Arroyo Arbitrator was not strange to the show. Before being purchased by Mr. Ford he was known in the East as Auburn Radiance. He is a typical specimen, and after holding away through the earlier classes he came through in the final to win the first award rather handily.

The winners bitch was Bestyette, owned and bred by Mrs. F. Janahl of Houston, Texas. Bestyette won with little difficulty after scoring successively in the earlier classes.

Imported Pekingese made a clean sweep in the high awards in their competition with American-breds, much to the surprise of many admirers of the latter. The American-breds scored in some of the special and separate classes, but the imported dogs took both the firsts and the reserves in the final selections. This class, in fact, marked a clean sweep for the Yankibourne Kennels, which contains in its collection some of the greatest stars of the English-bred Pekingese now in this country.

The Yankibourne Kennels provided all the winners and reserves. The winning dog was Chung Chang of Alderbourne, a red sable which held undisputed sway throughout the judging. Rex of Glenlyon, a parti-color, was held in reserve. The winners bitch was Cumbala Cee Mee, and Felicie of Alderbourne was held in reserve.

The largest winners among the American bred Pekingese were from the Lladuck Kennels of Mrs. Grace Jackson, Bound Brook, N. J. Mrs. Jackson scored in the classes for novice dogs and puppy bitches and took both first and second in the class for limit bitches not exceeding eight pounds.

WELL-KNOWN WOMEN IN DOG SHOW CROWD

Some Explain Fine Points of Their Pets Personally—Spring Costumes Seen.

The interest of society in the Dog Show was quite as keen yesterday as on the opening day. Many exhibitors well known in the social world remained throughout the day and some of the women among them were seen proudly explaining the fine points of the dogs which they have entered. The women seem to have a particular preference for terriers and they make up the entire list of exhibitors in the list of West Highland white terriers, and predominate in the list of Cairn terriers.

The Chows closely rivaled the terriers in interest for the visitors to the show and the German police dogs were also a centre of attention.

The mild weather brought forth many Springtime costumes. Semi-sport costumes were seen and blue serge suits, which give the authentic sign that Spring is not far distant—were seen in great numbers. There was an unusual number of young people on hand yesterday, due, no doubt, to the holiday, for they rarely put in an appearance in large numbers before Saturday.

Richard H. Williams, President of the Westminster Kennel Club, visited the show for the first time. Mrs. Philip Hinchcliffe, who came from England to act as judge, attended the afternoon session. She is sailing for home on Saturday.

Others who were in attendance yesterday were Mrs. Bourke Roche, Mrs. M. M. Van Buren, President of the Pekingese Club; Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Waldo Brixey, Mr. and Mrs. Elbridge Gerry Snow, Jr.; Miss Janet Snow, who won many prizes; Joseph E. Widener and a party of friends from Philadelphia; Mrs. Benjamin H. Throop, Miss Claire Knapp, Mrs. Bertram G. Work and Mrs. Paul Moore.

CANADIAN CURLERS WIN BY TWO POINTS

Special to The New York Times.

UTICA, N. Y., Feb. 12.—In what proved to be the closest and keenest struggle ever waged in international curling circles, Canadian curlers today successfully defended the Gordon International Medal, winning from the United States by a score of 189 to 187. The superb play of the Heather and Lachine rinks in the afternoon round brought victory to the Canadians, the former outclassing the newly organized Syracuse club, 27—10, and the veteran Robert Lucas leading his rink to a 20—11 win over Brae Burn. By virtue of its score of 27 points, the Heather rink, skipped by N. D. McLeod, secures possession of the medal for the ensuing year.

The United States curlers led in the morning play, 1 up, 93 to 94. The morning games were evenly divided, each country taking two, while Jersey City and Victoria played a tie game at 17. The fight of the Victoria rink was one of the outstanding features of the day. Apparently hopelessly outclassed, 16 to 4, Captain McCreary and his fellow-soldiers, all ex-service men, one of whom was Captain Falkenberg, the famous Canadian ace, launched a strong attack in the closing ends and finished on even terms with the Jersey rink.

Scoring honors for the day were annexed by Dr. T. H. Farrell and his rink, composed of E. C. Hare, A. O. Foster and A. M. Johnston, who, playing against St. Lawrence, totaled the fine score of 35 in the afternoon round. The Uticans finished 21 up over their opponents, and the Country Club of Brookline ran a close second on a neighboring sheet of ice, finishing 11 up over Caledonia. Schenectady, Syracuse and Boston rinks fell behind, however, and Canada took the season's premier honors by one of the scantiest margins ever known in this great competition.

DENIES BURNS IS HOLDOUT.

Giants' Secretary Assured That Outfielder Will Soon Sign Contract.

While admitting that George Burns, the star outfielder of the Giants, had not yet signed a contract to play for the club during the coming season, Joseph D. O'Brien, Secretary of the club, yesterday hastened to deny a report that Burns was a holdout. He said that Burns had assured him he would sign. He declared there was no difficulty over money matters, but admitted that there were some minor details which required final adjustment.

Just what these minor details are is a matter for conjecture. Burns, together with all the other players on the Giants' roster, was given an automatic increase in salary this season because of the return to the longer playing schedule. When it was reported that the outfielder was a holdout it was naturally assumed that he was not satisfied with the salary offered him by the club.

Airplane Enables Speaker to Keep Cleveland Date

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—A report telling how Tris Speaker of the Cleveland American League baseball club made a train by air route, permitting him to report to Cleveland on time, was received today by Major Gen. Charles T. Menoher, Director of the Army Air Service.

Speaker received a telegram at his ranch in Hubbard, Texas, recently, bidding him report to the Cleveland club at once, but he could not make the train at Waco by any known land route or conveyance. It occurred to him that perhaps his friend, former Lieutenant Belser of Kelly Field, who lived on a neighboring ranch, might help him out. This Belser did. They left in Belser's plane at 11:15 A. M. for Waco and arrived at Richfield in about one hour and a half, permitting Speaker to catch his train at 1:15 for Cleveland.

MINOR LEAGUES ARE READY FOR PEACE

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—Minor and major league baseball magnates got together today in an informal meeting to discuss plans for a new agreement between the two organizations. No action was taken, but indications are that relations will be resumed in some agreement similar to that which existed until a year ago, when it was discarded, leaving the minors to go their own way.

Another session will be held tomorrow, which is likely to bring about the restoration of the draft as well as the forming of a board to handle cases coming up between the minors and the majors. At the informal session a plan was formulated to provide a board of four men, two from the minors and two from the majors, with a neutral man as Chairman, the four men to pass on all cases, and in case of a dispute the Chairman to cast the deciding vote. Such a plan is almost certain to be adopted tomorrow, when the two factions get together.

Possibly major league men were a bit surprised at the mild demands of the minors when the two met. It had been generally supposed the little fellows would ask many things which the majors would consider impossible. However, the request for a representative board and the restoring of the draft were the only important things desired. No particulars concerning the draft were announced. The draft prices for the various leagues will be established at tomorrow's session.

The business might have been completed today had President Johnson of the American League been present. He failed to appear, and the American League consequently could take no official action. The National League went into session at the appointed hour and named a committee of three to represent the league in the gathering with the minors. President Ebetts of Brooklyn, President Herrmann of Cincinnati and President Dreyfuss of Pittsburgh were the three men on the committee.

The National Leaguers went into session with the minor league committee early in the afternoon, but the American League was represented only by two volunteers, William Richardson of Washington and Harry Grabiner, Secretary of the Chicago White Sox. They took part in the informal discussion. It is likely President Johnson will get the American League men together tomorrow morning and name a committee for the work.

All eight members of the minors were on hand, some of them coming from the Pacific Coast, some from the far South and some from the East. All will remain for the session today. The eight were: Cal Ewing of Oakland, representing the Pacific Coast League; Thomas Hickey, representing the American Association; Dave Fultz of the International League, Walter Morris of the Texas League, Al Tearney of the Three-Eye League, Ed Hanlon of the Western League, D. D. Martin of the Southern Association, and John Farrell of the National Association of Minor Leagues.

GOVERNMENT TO AID OLYMPIC OFFICIALS

Honorary Presidency of Committee Is Tendered Mr. Wilson —Army and Navy to Help.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 12.—Official Government sanction and support for the team which will represent the United States in the Olympic Games at Antwerp next Summer was obtained by the Olympic Committee in a series of conferences today with high officials of the Government.

The position of honorary President of the American Olympic Committee was accepted provisionally by Secretary Tumulty for President Wilson. Secretaries Baker and Daniels were made Honorary Vice Presidents of the committee, and Under Secretary of State Polk agreed to serve as a member of the committee.

The Olympic Committee also met a number of officers of the army and navy in a conference at which the co-operation of both branches of the service was pledged. Tentative plans were discussed for the inclusion of athletes from both the army and navy in the team of more than two hundred which will sail from New York in July, and ways and means were considered for the formation of the team. Further action along these lines will be taken in the near future.

The American Olympic Committee was represented in the conferences by Gustavus T. Kirby, President; F. W. Rubien, Secretary, and Colonel Palmer E. Pierce, President of the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

In discussing the acceptance of the Honorary Presidency by President Wilson, Secretary Tumulty assured the committee of the President's approval of the United States' participation in the international games to be staged in Belgium.

Secretaries Daniels and Baker became Vice Presidents in formally written acceptances, the delivery of which was recorded in motion pictures, which later will become part of the film history of the American Olympic team of 1920. Secretary Baker's letter of acceptance, addressed to President Kirby, was as follows:

"I accept with pleasure an Honorary Vice Presidency in the American Olympic Committee. The work of the committee both in physical education and in the cultivation of international good feeling is of great importance, and I am happy to be associated with it."

APPEL, SQUASH CHAMPION, LOSES TO CORDIER IN SEMI-FINAL ROUND

TITLE MATCH TOMORROW

Dana and Cordier to Meet on Columbia Club Court Preceding Ganley-Mullins Tilt at Harvard Club.

Yale will meet Harvard in the final round of the national squash tennis tournament at the Columbia University Club tomorrow afternoon, and a new amateur champion will be crowned, for Auguste J. Cordier of the Yale Club upset all prognostications yesterday by coming from behind in the longest and hardest match staged this season, and defeating the 1919 titleholder, John W. Appel, Jr., in three out of five games, 6—15, 10—15, 15—11, 15—7, 15—8.

The winner, who earlier in the year captured first honors in the national handicap event, although carrying the heaviest impost of that tournament, will meet Anderson Dana for the title at 2 P. M. tomorrow, the final preceding by two hours the professional challenge match between Ganley and Mullins at the Harvard Club.

Yesterday's great battle required nearly two hours of steady play to reach a decision, and in the end it was superior physical condition that told the story. Appel and Cordier had met twice before this season, in the Class A team matches of the Metropolitan League, and on each occasion the ex-champion was the winner in straight games. With the national title at stake he was fully expected to repeat the trick yesterday, even though he had not been well recently, and had barely succeeded in eliminating Jay Gould on his way to the semi-finals.

Appel Strong at the Start.

In the first two games Appel looked like a sure winner, for he seemed able to cover his court in impregnable fashion, and was constantly driving his opponent into errors with his steady returning of the ball. Those first two games, however, took a lot out of the Harvard star, for the rallies were long and the points came slowly, seldom more than one in a hand. It needed twenty-four hands to reach the score of 15—8 in the opener, and the second session ran to sixteen more before Appel could claim a victory at 15—10.

When the third game again went up into the twenties, with Cordier gradually pulling away to win it at 15—11, some of the spectators already began to scent an upset, for Appel was obviously tiring, and it was clear that he must win in four games if at all.

Then suddenly Cordier, who had been hitting wildly and sacrificing everything for speed in the early sessions, began to steady down and assume a remarkable control of his shots. Spectacular runs of four and five in succession gave him a long lead, and eventually a hurried rush gave him the game that squared the match. This game was decided in only ten hands and ended at 15—7 in the Yale man's favor.

Appel made a brief spurt at the start of the final game, and later, after trailing at 2—7, used up all his reserve strength in another desperate effort which tied the points. But this finished him, and in the remaining hands he was barely able to run around the court, while his strokes lost both their speed and their accuracy. His backhand, in particular, went to pieces, and he succeeded in picking up only one more ace, while Cordier forged steadily ahead, to take the rubber and the match at 15—8.

Terrific Play Bursts Balls.

The former title holder looked good at the start, his first ace coming on a backhand smash that traveled like lightning twice the length of the inclosure. Both men were playing their shots close to the tell-tale and taking chances in an effort to kill the ball outright and both hit so hard that several racquets were broken, while the ball itself had to be replaced every few minutes. On two occasions the forty-five-pound pressure of air burst its bounds violently as a result of the terrific beating to which it was subjected, and the points had to be played over as the hissing piece of rubber fell shapeless to the floor.

The summary and score by points follow:

CASEY NOW BOND SALESMAN

Star Half Back Leaves Harvard to Begin Business Career.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Feb. 12.—Eddie Casey, Harvard's star half back, hero of the Princeton and Yale games, has closed his eyes to the possibilities of another year of college football, quit Harvard, and today entered on his new duties in the banking district. Eddie has become a bond salesman and has for associates in his new job no less a former Harvard star than Minot '11, plunging full back, who is associate manager of the firm, and Joe Brooks, who scored a touchdown for Williams against Ham Fish's Harvard eleven in '10, played tackle on Colgate's great teams of 1912, 1913, and 1914, and was head coach of the Williams eleven of last year.

With Casey, Captain Billy Murray of the Varsity eleven also leaves college. Murray has elected the leather business. Both have received their college war degrees.

STECHER THROWS ZBYSZKO.

Champion Wrestler Flattens Rival in 1 Hour, 32 Min., 30 Sec.

BOSTON, Feb. 12.—Joe Stecher, world's heavyweight catch-as-catch-can wrestling champion, successfully defended his title here tonight by defeating Wladek Zbyszko, whom he downed in 1 hour 32 minutes and 30 seconds. The fall was made by a full body scissors and a wrist lock.

Stecher while reeling under Zbyszko's attack secured the hold that resulted in the fall. For five minutes before he had been held in a toe hold, after he had gripped Zbyszko for an equal length of time with a head lock. Stecher used practically the head lock and scissors, while Zbyszko relied upon the toe hold.

It limits the period of racing to 112 days a year.

FIFTY-TO-ONE SHOT FIRST BY A BLOCK

Ponderosa Victor on New Orleans Track at Long Odds—Stack Rides 3 Winners.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Feb. 12.—Ponderosa, a four-year-old gelding which has been a chronic "also ran" in his five starts here, took the bit between his teeth and gave the patrons at the Fair Grounds a few thrills and a real surprise when he romped home the easiest kind of a winner at 50 to 1 in the final race of the day. This was the second real long shot to go over during the meeting, Almino at 100 to 1 still holding first honors in this respect. As the price indicates Ponderosa had few backers, and ran largely for glory so far as the players were concerned.

Ponderosa didn't even glean an embarrassing amount of glory, as the final race brought out twelve cheap platers for the mile and a sixteenth test, and it did not take much of a horse to win. Otsego was made the favorite at 11 to 5, and managed to save the place, with Lady Ward third. Ponderosa seemed to take kindly to a muddy track which had been drenched overnight. He made every post a winning one, and finally galloped in eight lengths in front of Otsego.

Breaking from the outside Ponderosa rushed to the front, gained the rail at the first turn and began to show his heels ever more dimly to the others in the race. Lady Ward followed the pace for a time and then dropped back, while Otsego took after the pacemaker. But it was of no avail. Ponderosa was reviling in the mud, and without urging on the part of his rider soon lifeposed of the ones which were trailing him and entering the stretch drew away to win with ridiculous ease. Otsego finished fast, but was too tired to keep up with the leader, and beat Lady Ward by two lengths for second place. Ponderosa had never finished better than sixth in any of his previous starts here.

The feature on the card was the Proteus Handicap, a six-furlong sprint for three-year-olds and upward. This went to Mr. Dattner's Minute Man, which won handily by a length and a half despite an accident at the start which nearly cost him the race. Minute Man stumbled a few strides from the barrier and nearly went to the ground. Jockey Stack pulled his head up and got the colt into his stride again. The accident had put Minute Man back to last position among the four starters, and he seemed to have lost his chance for victory. But with fine courage he raced into the lead again and held it safely to the end.

Jockey Stack, who rode Minute Man, carried off the riding honors of the day and loomed up as a rival to Coltiletti. Stack was astride three winners in the course of the day.

RICE AND MATHEWS WIN.

Overcome Steinbugler and Brussel in Class B Balkline Tourney.

Two matches were played in the national Class B 18.2 balkline billiard tournament at the Brooklyn Billiard Academy yesterday afternoon and evening. Of all the games that have been played thus far in this National Association of Amateur Billiard Players' tournament none have been productive of as much variety in cue performances as these. Good and bad billiards were played, all four of the players being equally guilty of erratic playing. In the afternoon, Julian Rice defeated Robert J. Steinbugler by a score of 200 to 189, and in the evening Charles P. Mathews won from Sidney M. Brussel, 200 to 133.

Coming from behind with a rush that swept Steinbugler completely off his feet Rice for a stretch of six innings played truly remarkable billiards. He was trailing when he launched upon a series of consecutive runs that netted him 118 points. During this rally, which put the game on ice for him, Rice averaged close to twenty and displayed a versatility that surprised even his most ardent supporters. His runs were a combination of close manipulation interspersed with occasional excursions around the table and punctuated with some brilliant masse shots.

Both players made high runs of 31 and Rice averaged 7 4-28, while Steinbugler's average was 5 19-28.

In the evening game Brussel played such wide open billiards that Mathews was seriously handicapped in his work at the table. Whenever the latter took his turn he invariably found the balls widely spread, and, as a result, he experienced great difficulty in getting them together. In this way the game developed into one in which close billiards was liberally mingled with open-table playing.

COLUMBIA FIVE IS DEFEATED BY PENN

Locals Lose Last Chance of Winning Basket Ball Title—Score Is 37 to 18.

INTERCOLLEGIATE BASKET BALL LEAGUE.
Standing of the Colleges.

Club.	Games.	W.	L.	P.C.
Pennsylvania	3	3	0	1000
Yale	4	3	1	.750
Cornell	4	2	2	.500
Princeton	5	2	3	.400
Columbia	3	1	2	.333
Dartmouth	3	0	3	.000

Columbia lost every last chance it had to finish first in the Intercollegiate Basket Ball League race this Winter in last night's Alumni Day game at the Morningside gymnasium. Pennsylvania, continuing its sensational drive for permanent possession of the trophy, just about clinched this year's pennant by drubbing the New Yorkers, 37 to 18. Rare generalship on the part of the Quakers, coupled with an irresistible brand of team work, brought the victory.

The local five, fooled into believing Penn was weaker than it really was, shot its bolt during the first half, and when the second session began to develop into faster basket ball the Columbia team was completely worn out. Columbia was first to score, and quickly ran into a lead of 11 to 3. Here Penn took a brace, following such excellent team work as Rosenast and Grave exhibited, but the Philadelphians were unable to catch the locals before the whistle. At the end of the first half Columbia was leading, 12 to 11.

Penn took matters into her own hands in the second half. Within thirty seconds after play was resumed Sweeney tossed a foul goal, evening the score. Rosenast then contributed the field goal that gave Penn a margin of two points. This was sufficient. The Quaker quintet was never again headed, and continued scoring until it had run up twelve more points without a single tally being chalked on the Columbia side of the scoreboard.

During the second half, Penn scored 26 points to Columbia's 6, and the Quakers were guilty of only three fouls. Columbia hung on gamely, but the speed put forth in the opening session had tired her players. Penn began to find it easy to prance down the floor to a place underneath the local hoops, and the combination plays of Rosenast, Sweeney and Grave, while the two guards held their ground on defense, thrilled the thousands of Columbia grads. They proclaimed the Penn five the fastest seen in New York in years and predicted a walk-away victory in the league race, which has still a month more to go.

The line-up:

Rosenast	L. F.	Johnson
Sweeney	R. F.	Tynan
Grave	C.	Watson
Deck	L. G.	Stutz
McNichol	R. G.	Farrell

Goals from field—Rosenast (5), Sweeney (3), Grave (5), Johnson, Watson, Stutz, Farrell, Horowitz. Goals from foul—Sweeney, 11 out of 19; Farrell, 7 out of 10; Stewart, 1 out of 2.

Substitutions—Penn: Zucker for McNichol, Gates for Grave, Hantzinger for Rosenast. Columbia: Weinstein for Tynan, Horowitz for Stutz, Stewart for Farrell.

Referee—J. M. O'Shea, West Point. Umpire—Ed Therp, De La Salle. Time of halves—Twenty minutes each.

Accounts for Every Basket Made by N. Y. Aggies—Temple Loses, 22-14.

The New York Aggies of Farmingdale, L. I., defeated Temple University of Philadelphia yesterday afternoon on the Aggies' home courts by 22 to 14. It was the most bitterly fought game of any ever played on the Aggies' court. The shining light of the contest was the wonderful work of Chester Nichols, the Aggies' right forward and great all-around athlete, who scored all of the 22 points made by the farmer boys. It is believed to be a world's record for one player to score every point made by his team. Splendid support was given Nichols.

PINEHURST, N. C., Feb. 12.—Miss Eleanor T. Chandler of Philadelphia, winner of the qualifying medal in the St. Valentine tournament for women, will be opposed by Mrs. John D. Armstrong of Buffalo in tomorrow's final contest. Miss Chandler defeated Mrs. Frank S. Danforth of North Fork by 3 and 2 in today's semi-final.

Mrs. Armstrong routed the prophets by going around in 92 and winning from Mrs. J. F. Duryea of Springfield, 3 and 2. The Buffalo golfer's 92 included a 6 on the short eighteenth after the match was over, and is the best round made by a woman player at Pinehurst this season.

The summary:

First Eight—Miss Eleanor T. Chandler, Huntingdon Valley, beat Mrs. F. S. Danforth, North Fork, 3 and 2; Mrs. J. D. Armstrong, Buffalo, beat Mrs. J. F. Duryea, Springfield, 3 and 2.

THE YARMOUTH OFF WITH WHISKY CARGO

DRY AGENTS SIGH IN RELIEF

Guarding Vessel Cost Government $4,200—One Visitor Arrested—Time Up for Liquor Signs.

After incurring an expense of $4,200 to the Government, the Black Star liner Yarmouth left New York yesterday to continue her interrupted voyage to Havana with $4,000,000 worth of liquor in her hold. For the last three weeks the vessel has been in port guarded night and day by revenue agents under Prohibition Supervising Commissioner James F. Shevlin, who said he was relieved that the vessel was on her way to Cuba.

As she lifted her anchors and moved slowly from the pier at West Eightieth Street the ten Federal prohibition agents to whose lot fell the task of seeing that none of the cargo escaped shoreward, gave sighs of relief and went rejoicing back to the Internal Revenue Office to await another assignment.

Captain Joshua Cockburn, the negro skipper, was on the bridge when the Yarmouth departed, the negro crew was much in evidence and the thirty-five passengers were at the rail to wave good-bye to their friends on the pier.

Below decks the Yarmouth carried 21,419 cases of whisky, 500 cases of champagne, and 350 barrels of wine. The Yarmouth sailed originally from this port on Jan. 17 for Havana. When below the Virginia Capes engine trouble developed and the vessel was towed back to New York. After she got here some of her cargo was missing, and Commissioner Shevlin put a guard on board. Twenty men working in two shifts kept watch, and it cost the Government $100 a day and $100 a night to maintain the guard.

A white man who said he was James Creanz, laborer, of 148 Carroll Street, Brooklyn, was arrested Wednesday night as he was leaving the Yarmouth, charged with having two bottles of whisky on his person. Edward Dermody, Federal prohibition agent, who made the arrest, asserted that Creanz said at first that he had bought the whisky, but later said that it had been given to him. He was locked up in the West Sixty-eighth Street Police Station.

Two druggists and a saloon keeper were arrested yesterday in Brooklyn by revenue agents, charged with violating the Volstead law.

Commissioner Shevlin announced that the time limit for the removal of wine and liquor signs had expired, and that hereafter those who fail to remove such signs will be prosecuted. The penalty is $500 fine or a month in jail or both.

FARMERS AND LABOR CONVENE IN CHICAGO

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—Representatives of leading farmer and labor organizations met here today at the opening of the All-American Farm Labor Congress.

Direct trading, co-operative banking and standardisation of co-operative methods were the principal subjects on the program.

Glenn E. Plumb, general counsel for the railway brotherhoods, told the delegates this evening that they were seeking through co-operative effort to escape "from the duress imposed by a Government of a small group of men."

"Our problem in meeting the national debt," he said, "is to so adjust our affairs that the 2 per cent. of the people owning 60 per cent. of the wealth shall pay their percentage of this indebtedness, that the 33 per cent. of the people owning 35 per cent. of the wealth shall pay the percentage due from them, and that the 65 per cent. of the people who own 5 per cent. of the wealth shall not be required to pay more than their proportionate share of this indebtedness.

"If we meet this indebtedness by a tax on industry, we distribute the liability to each man in accordance with his purchasing power. When all is said and done, we may be compelled to accept the solution, already adopted in Germany, and now considered inevitable in Great Britain—the discharge of the entire national debt by placing a capital levy upon property."

"We seek to engage in a co-operative enterprise embracing every step from the production of raw materials through collection, manufacture, storage, and distribution to the ultimate consumer," he said.

In attacking the Sedition bill he said:

EUROPE RECOVERS, ASSERTS HOUSTON

Declares Reconstruction Is Going On While They Are Talking About It.

OUR OWN POSITION BRIGHT

EXPENDITURES DROPPING

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Secretary Houston in a review of the financial situation today expressed confidence that Europe's monetary problems would be settled satisfactorily. Referring to home finances, he stated that the last floating indebtedness of the United States would be canceled Monday, when the final issue of "loan" certificates of indebtedness, approximately $60,000,000, would be redeemed.

"The depression in high-grade investment securities in this country at the present time is to a very important extent the result of heavy selling of such securities in our markets from foreign sources," he said. "This, as Secretary Glass said in his annual report, is one of the processes which is stimulated by the very position of the exchanges which it tends to correct. By absorbing these high-grade investment securities the American people are furnishing capital to Europe at a time of Europe's need and are giving this help in just the way that Europe helped America in the period of America's growth and of her own monetary troubles.

Aided by Private Capital.

"In the days of the infancy of the republic, in the days of our civil war and of the period of reconstruction after the civil war, of the monetary panics which we suffered at frequent intervals until the establishment of our Federal Reserve System, America suffered greatly for lack of capital and credit, and because of her depreciated currency and, later, her inelastic currency. In those days Europe came to America's aid, not by Government loans, not with any comprehensive plan, but by the investment of private capital upon attractive terms in American enterprises and in the purchase of American securities at bargain prices.

"Honest and energetic business men in both countries went to work in their own way and solved the problem on business terms. Yet in those days Europe was far better able to meet the relatively small demands of America than is America now, burdened as she is by Government expenditures since the beginning of the war to the aggregate amount of about $36,700,000,000, to meet the stupendous demands of Europe today. I am confident that the solution of Europe's problems will be found by the wisdom and courage of European statesmen in facing the monetary difficulties imposed upon them by the great war and by the enlightened, sympathetic and friendly co-operation of the business men and workmen of America and Europe when peace is restored and the hope and fear of Government interference are removed."

He estimated that Europe has received $4,000,000,000 from the United States since the armistice.

Secretary Houston takes an optimistic view of the whole situation. He said that all reports from Europe indicated that "reconstruction was going on while they were talking about it," and cited the rebuilding of French railroads and bridges as an example. Concerning the domestic situation, Secretary Houston said that approximately $1,000,000,000 in road building would be unertaken this year and that building permits indicated that the country rapidly was making up the shortage in houses caused by the cessation of construction during the war.

Sees Liberty Bond Market Bright.

Secretary Houston asserted that "the position of the Treasury and the future of the market for the outstanding issues of Liberty bonds and Victory notes is very bright."

The situation has now shaped up, he said, so that all should go well unless Congress engages in large expenditures, to meet which it would be necessary to borrow heavily. There are outstanding at present in tax certificates, issued in anticipation of income and excess profits taxes, a total of $2,935,949,500. There is no element of uncertainty in this situation, however, as the issues of tax certificates are all estimated on business done in the calendar year 1919.

"The issues of tax certificates outstanding Feb. 10," he said, "is approximately as follows:

"Series T-8, interest 4½ per cent., dated July 15, 1919, due March 15, 1920—$315844,500.

"Series T-9, interest 4¾ per cent., dated Sept. 15, 1919, due March 15, 1920—$74,295,000.

"Series TM-3-1920, interest 4¾ per cent., dated Dec. 1, 1919, due March 15, 1920—$152,307,500.

"Series TM-4-1920, interest 4½ per cent., dated Feb. 2, 1920, due March 15, 1920—$304,877,000. Total, $547,324,000.

"Series TJ-1920, interest 4½ per cent., dated Dec. 15, 1919, due June 15, 1920—$72,130,000.

"Series T-10, interest 4½ per cent., dated Sept. 15, 1919, due Sept. 15, 1920—$657,469,000.

"Series TD-1920, interest 4¾ per cent., dated Jan. 2, 1920, due Dec. 15, 1920—$703,026,000.

"Although the Treasury will, of course, be obliged to borrow from time to time to meet the current deficit (which in January amounted to less than $93,000,000), in the intervals between income and profits tax installment payments, and the current requirements of the War Finance Corporation, the fact that the Treasury has no uncovered maturities is of immense importance. So long as the Treasury had certificates of indebtedness maturing in very large amounts and on dates when it could only provide the funds to meet them by fresh borrowings, its position might, under certain circumstances, have become embarrassing (though it never did), and it was consequently impossible for the Federal Reserve Board to exert any effective control over credit. The point is illustrated by the following quotation from The London Economist of Jan. 24:

"Plenty of money and a consequent demand for bills have been the chief features of the internal history of the money market. The plenty may be attributed to the fresh creation of ways and means advances, necessitated by the maturing of more Treasury bills than were applied for. By this process, as we have frequently pointed out, dealers in and users of credit can now at any time oblige the Government to create more 'cash at the bank' by the weapon that they hold in the shape of 1,000 millions odd Treasury bills outstanding. Thus the powers that be can make money dear by paying more for it, but they cannot make it really scarce until, by taxation or otherwise, they have reduced the effectiveness of this weapon.

"The fact that the Treasury of the United States is no longer in the position somewhat similar to that described by The Economist is of immense importance for the general welfare of the country and incidentally to the holders of Liberty bonds and Victory notes, since the danger of the Treasury's being obliged to borrow large sums to meet maturing certificates upon disadvantageous terms has been eliminated."

German Army 400,000 Strong; 100,000 Policing Forces Beside

PARIS, Feb. 12.—The German Army is still 400,000 strong, according to a report received by the Committee of Foreign Affairs today from General Niessel, head of the Baltic mission. In addition there are 100,000 policing forces, officers and noncommissioned officers. Germany is also well supplied with tanks, machine guns and airplanes. In the neutral zone alone, on the right bank of the Rhine, the policing forces number 15,000.

General Niessel adds that the German Minister of Defense, Noske, is in the hands of the General Staff and that the German Government is capable, if willing, of obtaining execution of the treaty clauses by the country.

PUTZIG, Poland, Feb. 11.—Ignorance of the very name of Putzig is excusable because it has hitherto stood for nothing more than a modest seaside retreat on the Baltic coast with fewer than 3,000 inhabitants. On Feb. 10 Putzig was the scene of a ceremony unique and of historical significance.

At this place and on this date Polish cavalry, with Poland's most famous General at their head, rode fetlock deep into the waves of the Baltic and in so doing symbolized that Poland's writ once more runs to the water's edge and that its ancient kingdom is reclaimed, its century of cherished ambition achieved.

Early in the morning Polish troops, completing the occupation of the "corridor," which separates West Prussia from the rest of Germany, reached Putzig, where shortly afterward arrived General Haller, who commanded the Polish legion which won its spurs in France, and a number of members of the Polish Parliament from Warsaw. From the wide countryside tens of thousands of people assembled to welcome the warriors whose deeds helped to bring them freedom.

At every half mile along the scores of miles of approaching avenues garlands were stretched across the roads from tree to tree and in every village the school children threw floral greetings beneath the horses' hoofs. In fact itself there was hardly a house from which the red and wite Polis colors were not flaunting.

At midday the church clocks broke into chimes and in the distance the thunder of saluting guns was heard, but it was late in the afternoon before all the actors in the drama assembled. There was formed a long cava.cade which moved toward the Strand. Varicolored and picturesque were the human elements in the scene. Three companies of Marine infantry in British khaki with naval caps kept the lines. Behind were aligned several squadrons of cavalry with their pennons and infantry in French horizon blue and steel helmets. Here and there were Catholic priests in gorgeous vestments and Polish societies, each carrying a multicolored banner.

Filling the great space of greensward behind were tens of thousands, all in the decorous black of Polish Sabbath and high holiday wear.

In this strange drama one figure, that of General Haller, on horseback, detached itself and then rode down to the beach into the sea, where there closed around him a group of staff officers. The General paused a moment, looked with a gaze that seemed to pierce the mist over the face of the waters, then turned toward the assembled multitude and in a few ringing sentences told how after 138 years Poland had once again returned to the sea.

Then the horses splashed their way back to dry land. The riders dismounted and closed around the flag-staff. Officers made a way for a dozen color bearers, each holding aloft the standard of a Polish regiment. The Polish Marine flag was dedicated by a Catholic Bishop and was hoisted. Simultaneously great guns roared out a salute whose thunder must have been carried to the Prussian side.

Once more General Haller stepped forward, drew from his finger a golden ring and threw it far out into the water, saying, as he did so:

"As Venice su symbolized its marriage with the Adriatic, so we Poles symbolize our marriage with our dear Baltic Sea."

CHARGES BRITISH DEALT SECRETLY WITH TURKEY

Briand's Newspaper Alleges That Treaty Promised a Mandate to England.

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 11.—Former Premier Briand's newspaper, the Eclair, charges today that representatives of Great Britain concluded a secret treaty with the Turkish Government last September by virtue of which certain guarantees were promised to the Sultan if he would not object to Britain having a mandate over Turkey. M. Briand asserts that the French Foreign Office has secured a copy of this document.

His charges assume seriousness because he is the power behind the present Government and may be the next Premier. He gives the following as the text of the alleged secret agreement:

"Article I. The British Government will assure the integrity and independence of Turkey under its mandate.

"Article II. Constantinople will remain the seat of the Caliphate and the Strait will be placed under British control.

"Article III. Turkey will not oppose the creation of an independent Kurdistan.

"Article IV. Turkey engages to sustain British control in Syria and in Mesopotamia, giving her any force necessary, and to give to the British power in all the Muselman parts of the British Empire, the moral support of the Sultan and the Caliphate.

"Article V. The British Government promises to furnish the necessary police forces to sustain the semi-constitutional Government in Turkey against Nationalistic movements.

"Article VI. Turkey renounces all claims upon Egypt and the Isle of Cyprus.

"Article VII. This Convention will have a personal and semi-official character and, the British Government will support before the peace conference proposals to these ends presented by the Ottoman delegates.

"Article VIII. As soon as the conditions of peace are fixed, His Majesty the Sultan will sign with the British Government a treaty based upon the present convention. This treaty will remain secret."

M. Briand accuses Britain of not playing fair with France, and asks why England now adopts a different Turkish policy from that set forth in this agreement. He predicts that Lloyd George will repudiate the alleged secret convention which, he says, was negotiated by subordinates of the British Government at Constantinople.

TELLS HOW RUMANIA DESPOILED HUNGARY

Asserts Allies Were Helpless, as Rumanians Had Army and They Had None.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

PARIS, Feb. 12.—One of the many ugly political pictures in troubled Europe today is the scene on the Theiss River. There rests the Rumanian Army, holding one-third of Hungary through no right recognized by any other power and in defiance of seventeen separate Peace Conference ultimatums to leave.

Brig. Gen. H. H. Bandholtz, who has been in Budapest for six months as a member of the Interallied Commission of Control, has arrived here. He emphasizes the fact that it is not true, as stated in the French press, that he has come to Paris to plead the Hungarian cause before the Committee of Ambassadors. It is Count Apponyi, chief of the delegation, who will plead the Hungarian cause before the Ambassadors. The time limit for Budapest's consideration of the Peace Treaty having expired, Apponyi has returned to Paris to place before the Allies these formal suggestions for changes.

First, that the Entente powers force their ally, Rumania, to leave Hungary and that in assessing indemnities the Allies take into consideration the crippling of Hungary by Rumanian requisitions of machinery and of production in three-fourths of the country; second, that to North Hungary shall be given regions where the Slovaks predominate unquestionably and plebiscites be allowed in some other sections; third, that better economic provisions be made for Hungary, and pointing out that the Peace Treaty, while exacting some supplies of iron from Hungary has sliced off nearly all the iron mines which used to belong to Hungary.

General Bandholtz, in common with other allied observers, states frankly that he believes the Hungarian request that the Rumanians be put back is reasonable.

From six months of observation the General is convinced that the Rumanians have no excuse for occupying the Theiss River line, since the Peace Conference fixed their boundaries a considerable distance to the eastward. Early in November the Rumanians promised, in response to one of the allied ultimatums, to leave Hungary. Months later they had evacuated Budapest, but never evacuated further than the Theiss River, which is about thirty miles east of there, whereas if they had kept their promise, which Frank Polk was largely instrumental in obtaining, they would have gone back fifty miles further.

In addition to holding this territory without having any title, the Rumanians also hold Bessarabia, which they tried in vain to get at the Peace Conference.

Only two weeks ago the Rumanian Premier appeared before the three Entente Premiers and said that if they gave his country title to Bessarabia his army might fight the Bolsheviki. Lloyd George, with a telegram from Bandholtz in front of him, told the Rumanian Premier to leave Hungary before he asked anything from the allies.

General Bandholtz says that wherever they have been in Hungary the Rumanians have taken away almost everything movable under the guise of requisitions. He has been largely instrumental in carrying out the peace Commission's order that a count be kept on everything the Rumanians took away. In Budapest he left an indexed record of all that went across the Theiss River bridges. One item was 35,000 freight cars. This record was kept by the peace conference for the purpose of charging against Rumania's share of the war indemnities all the goods she took out of Hungary.

Rumania asserts that what she took was only in repayment for what was taken from her, but, as General Bandholtz points out, Rumania now put Hungary in a position where she cannot produce or pay her indemnity. Rumania has made Hungary a liability for the rest of Europe rather than an asset.

Speaking unofficially, General Bandholtz showed that he did not approve the tactics of the Rumanians in Hungary. In reply to his protest and those of other allied Generals against stripping Budapest, the Rumanian commander assured him that only supplies necessary to the army in the field were being taken.

Bandholtz demanded, "What does your army do with Gobelin tapestries?" As an answer he got a sweet smile, he says.

General Bandholtz had many interesting experiences. His best story is how the censor's stamp saved the Hungarian National Museum. Late one day in October, the Rumanian Commander, learning of rich treasures in gold in the museum, ordered it stripped the next morning. Hearing of it General Bandholtz went to the museum that night, looked the door, put the keys in his packet, pasted a strip of paper across the door, wrote his name on it, and having nothing else to seal it with placed the censor's stamp on it. Beneath the strip he left a note saying if anybody wanted the key that person could find it in his (Bandholtz's) pocket. It was not called for and the museum remained intact.

One story the General did not tell himself. On the night when the opera opened the management, feeling kindly toward the General, sent him a ticket for the royal box. The General went and took his place. Soon after the Rumanian commander arrived, and at once demanded of the management that he receive the royal box. The management told him that the American General had it and that he might go get it. But he did not.

General Bandholtz confirms the report that the Rumanian General issued an order forbidding further use by his officers of rouge pots and lip sticks. Bandholtz approved the order and said that it should also have forbidden the use of extract of Vanilla as a perfume.

General Bandholtz explained that there were many interesting issues as to final authority when the Rumanians were in Budapest. As he explained it, "we were told to run things, but the Rumanians had the army and we didn't. If I had had a regiment of Americans it might have been different."

The Rumanians went into Budapest after the fall of Bela Kun and the breaking up of the Hungarian Army. Then in Budapest they occupied three-fourths of Hungary. They withdrew to the Theiss River late in November and that is as far as they retired. The General explained that the Rumanians showed lack of common sense in their requisitions, that frequently they would take two or three valuable machines out of a factory, tying up everything, and that in taking out the machines they would do it in such a way as to ruin them. He said that he found this condition in several places that he inspected. Farming implements, food, seed, grain, horses and cows were generally taken, and these were all sent to Rumania.

General Bandholtz believes that the Rumanians have not only done Hungary wrong, but also have sowed the seeds of future conflict, for the Hungarians cannot soon forget what has been done to them. For the peace of Europe he hopes that the Russians will not try to regain Bessarabia from Rumania, for he fears that this would be too great a temptation for the Hungarians to attack Rumania from the other side.

Central European Relief Cannot Be Arranged Until U.S. Congress Acts, Says British Minister

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—In answer to a question in the House of Commons today, Austen Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, stated that, in view of the great emergency of the question of economic conditions in Central Europe, and despite the difficulties of the financial situation of the United Kingdom with regard to foreign exchange, the British Government had informed the United States Government that over and above the £12,500,000 voted this year, they were prepared to contribute a further sum for European relief, not exceeding half the sum to be contributed by the United States, and not exceeding £10,000,000 in all.

The Canadian Government had also intimated its desire to make a contribution, and the British Government was confident that other Governments, both allied and neutral, would also co-operate in dealing with what might be truly called the desperate needs of certain parts of Europe.

The bounds which the British Treasury set upon the amount of relief to Central Europe are clearly determined by consideration of the incidence of Anglo-American exchange. As pointed out by Mr. Chamberlain, this is his reply to a memorial advocating an international financial conference. The British view is that in extending credits to Central Europe Great Britain cannot take any steps which will involve further indebtedness to the United States, and a consequent further depreciation in the purchasing power of the sovereign across the Atlantic.

The limitation of a further British grant to £10,000,000 is in some quarters taken to mean that were the United States to appropriate $100,000,000 for Central Europe relief, with such contributions as other Governments may make, this would be adequate for the purpose of meeting the immediate needs and putting the distressed countries concerned in a position to work out their own salvation.

A cartoon in the current issue of Punch, by Bernard Partridge, represents Uncle Sam smoking a big cigar, wearing a fur coat, and looking scornfully at a woman in rags, representing "Starving Europe," clasping a baby to her breast. The legend under the cartoon is "Another reservation." "Europe—'God help me.'" "America—'Very sad case, but I'm afraid she ain't trying.'"

LONDON, Feb. 12 (Associated Press)—Replying to a question as to what steps the Government proposed to take for the relief of Central Europe, Austen Chamberlain, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, said in the House of Commons this afternoon that the final arrangements would not be made until the Congress of the United States had granted the necessary powers.

Mr. Chamberlain said the British share would be applicable for the provision of British supplies, foodstuffs, raw materials and other essentials, and the payment of the freight charges on the goods carried on British ships. If the American grant was limited to $50,000,000, Mr. Chamberlain added, the necessary tonnage for transporting the American supplies could be provided.

PARIS STYLES SHOW A WIDE VARIETY

Dressmakers Offer the Individual Latitude in the Spring Fashions.

AMERICAN VIEWS REGARDED

Pannier Effect Losing Some of Its Popularity—Sleeves Are Again in Favor.

PARIS, Feb. 11.—According to their tastes and the houses they patronize, women who buy their clothes in Paris next Spring will be robed like Cleopatra, gowned with dignity and large panniers in the style of their ancestors of 1830 or tricked out sprucely with what is termed an air of Parisian impudence.

There has never been so great a variety of design as is to be seen at the exhibitions of the great shops now going on. What is to be the fashion will be for the buyers and women to decide, for the dressmakers are trying something of everything.

One concession seems to be general. Designers in fixing the length of skirts and the height of the backs of dresses have taken into account what other nationalities than the French will wear. They have had an eye on the American market and among the models are always some of the graceful frocks that suit American women best.

One of the new houses, Madeleine & Madeleine, in the Champs Elysees, has especially given attention to the long-waisted type. In its evening gowns it follows Egyptian styles, abundantly embroidered and hung with jewelled chains and ornaments.

Another innovation is the return of the sleeve. Sometimes, it is true, it is scarcely large enough to be noticed. But it has returned and the bare arms of the last season are no longer in favor. When it is long the sleeve is baggy at the wrist and when it is short it makes a puff at the shoulder. As displayed by mannequins, it is always something from the undressed appearance which has characterized the styles of the last year.

As more shops open their showrooms, it becomes obvious that the pannier is losing the battle which it started last year. Some of its advocates have gone ahead with it and exaggerated its effect until it resembles the crinoline, but others have left it severely alone. Getting about in an automobile has apparently been too difficult for Paris women when encumbered by hoops. Only for ball dresses and perhaps for garden parties and fashionable race meetings are we likely to see reproductions of what was worn when the United States was young.

The last of three categories into which the styles may be divided finds successful advocates in another new house, that of Charlotte & Germaine, which adopted it consistently in all its designs. The skirt is as short as it ever was and the hips have the ease of the pannier effect, in details which follow no historic style, there is a modern touch in these dresses.

Though there is no uniformity there is this at least to be said, that out of the anarchy of styles every woman will be able to choose what suits her best.

ORDER MARRIED MEN HOME.

No More Marriages of Soldiers in Coblenz Area Allowed.

AMERICAN HEADQUARTERS, COBLENZ, Feb. 1.—Two hundred and fifty soldiers of the American forces in Germany who have married European girls have been instructed to start soon for America with their wives, in accordance with a recent order of Major Gen. Henry T. Allen, in command.

In connection with this order it was also announced that army authorities would not consent in future to marriages of American soldiers on duty in the occupied area, officers contending that men without wives in Germany are better soldiers under the present circumstances.

King Christian Sends Greeting to New Compatriots — German Papers Complain of System.

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 12.—The result of the plebiscite in the first zone of Slesvig of course excited the Germans in Slesvig to violence and trouble of every kind. Yesterday a German climbed to the roof of the hotel in Flensburg, where the International Commission resides, tore down the English and French flags, tearing the French one to pieces, then hauled up German flags instead. The man has not been found yet.

The International Commission declares the plebiscite a great Danish victory, showing that the Danes with about 85 per cent of the population (as some 10 per cent. of the voting Germans have again returned to their homes in Germany) have pronounced their will to return to the mother country. The German papers still speak about "peaceful negotiations" with Denmark to have a part of the first zone returned.

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 12.—Denmark won an overwhelming victory in the plebiscite held in the Province of Slesvig by which the future status of that district was determined, according to official figures issued here this morning. These figures show that Danish adherents cast 75,023 votes, while the German polled only 25,329.

In a Council of State held yesterday in response to an enthusiastic reference by Premier Zahle to the result of the plebiscite King Christian recalled with emotion how his grandfather fifty-six years ago had shared the sorrow of the Danes over the dismemberment of their country, but had told them to cherish the hope that their territory one day would be restored. The King added that his father also had hoped to live long enough to see the nation again united, but that fate had denied him this privilege.

"It is my happy, if undeserved, fortune to see this glorious day," said King Christian. "Humbly thanking God and in fond remembrance of those, dead and living, who fought to preserve Danish Slesvig, I send the first greeting of welcome to my returning compatriots, whose love of their mother country has only been strengthened by their long and trying period of alienation from her."

BERLIN, Feb. 11.—This afternoon's Berlin newspapers regretfully admit that Northern Slesvig was lost to Germany through Tuesday's plebiscite, but they complain that the conditions surrounding the voting were unfair. The returns, says Vorwärts, demonstrate the injustice of the bloc system. The Tageblatt thinks that the Danish jubilation is possibly premature. "It is far easier to annex 6,000 Germans than to assimilate them," the newspaper says. The Zeitung am Mittag charges the French with deliberately molesting Germans who were attempting to enter the voting booths.

VICTORY FOR PARIS CAKES.

Ban on Baking and Sale Restricted to Two Days a Week.

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 12.—The pastry cooks and the public have won a victory over the politicians. Last week the Government decided that, in the interest of flour economy, baking and the sale of all pastries and cakes should be suppressed.

The bakers rose to a man. The art of the pastry cook was in danger, and thousands of men would be thrown out of work. The public added its quota of protest. The Government listened, hesitated and gave way.

A new order is to be issued limiting the baking and sale to five days in seven. Two days of each week will be real lenten days, when no one can indulge. At least, there will be no cakes for sale in the tea shops, but there will be nothing to prevent those who do not keep Lent from laying in two days' supplies.

Belief in Paris That France Will Acquiesce if Lloyd George Is Bent on It.

ANXIOUS FOR BRITAIN'S AID

Seeks Close Relations for Financial and Economic, as Well as Military Reasons.

PARIS, Feb. 12.—In Riga ten days ago every one was asking, "What is the allied policy toward Soviet Russia?" No reply was forthcoming, and it appeared that the question could only be answered in Paris or London.

But in Paris they simply say with a shrug of the shoulders: "The allied policy toward Soviet Russia—are you sure there is such a thing?" A form of reply which it hardly seems worth while crossing the Continent to receive.

Yet in point of fact the clear-sighted French diplomat who gave me this negative answer was revealing two great flaws in the relations of the Allies to Soviet Russia—firstly, the Allies have no combined plan for dealing with the Soviets, and, secondly, the individual suggestion put forward by one power—England—in the allied name is not, in the view of some observers here, worthy of the title of a policy. At best, they say, it is a mere "ballon d'essai" at the worst time—and a face-saving expedient or futile subterfuge.

This is none the less true because the Bolsheviki and their friends and agents throughout the world are uttering shouts of triumph over their "victory" in obtaining the abandonment of the allied blockade or because Esthonia has made peace, or Letvia and Poland are said to be about to do so, with the Soviet forces.

In Paris, which is a kind of intermediate point between Baltic ignorance and the decision to be reached in London, one can learn no more than the chief factors of the situation as they are likely to be presented in London and influence London's verdict. These factors, briefly, are as follows:

First, France dislikes the Soviets and all their works. The sound common sense of the French public has little or little use for the ruin they wrought in Russia and the trouble they are trying to cause in France as the sound common sense of the American public for the same ruin—of which it knows more than the French do—and the trouble they have already caused in America.

Second, the only policy France had—of supporting the reactionary Generals, for direct intervention appeared impossibly difficult and expensive—has simply blown up. The alternative of supporting Poland by the very serious objections that the Polish advance would unite the Russians against it even more solidly than did Denikin or Kolchak, and that moreover should the Poles reach Moscow they would probably want to keep it, and that if they did not it would not get the Russian problem anyway. So that France is at present undecided what to do, though highly unwilling to do anyting that looks like friendly relations with the Soviets.

Third, England and Italy have Premiers whose principle of government consists in sensing and doing today what they think the majority of the people will want done tomorrow. The majority may be wrong, or the Premiers' ears may only be catching the loud voices of the minority, but both Lloyd George and Nitti doubtless have good reason to believe that England and Italy want something done about Russia, want it done quickly, and want them to do it or make way for some one who will.

Subsequent events introduce the fourth factor, which may have some importance in London, namely, the announcement by the Soviet Ambassador, Litvinoff, that the Moscow Government has put him in charge of proposed trade arrangements with the co-operatives. This causes wonder here whether trade with co-operatives and trade with the Soviets are not synonymous. Or, in other words, whether Mr. Lloyd George's proposal, if it be carried out, does not mean peace with Soviet Russia and recognition of Bolshevist control.

Many reasons militate in favor of French acquiescence in the British view. While it is true that relations between England and France are not so close as they were there is every reason to suppose that for financial and economic reasons, as well as diplomatic and military ones, France is anxious to get together again with England. France may not want peace with the Soviets, but if England seems really set on it France, it is believed here, will probably yield and come into line.

WIRELESS PHONES NEAR.

Marconi Says the Present System Will Be Displaced Soon.

ROME, Feb. 11.—The newspapers today publish an article by Guglielmo Marconi, the inventor of wireless telegraphy, which says that the United States heads the list of all countries in wireless inventions.

"A strange phenomenon is that the most progressive countries of Western Europe have not yet developed wireless telephones, while China, the most backward nation, daily uses the wireless telephone for communication between cities and the rural districts," Signor Marconi says.

"Within this year wireless telephones will displace the present clumsy system with great economic advantage, eliminating the cost of the telephone lines and their upkeep. They will also do away with the interruptions due to atmospheric causes."

REPORT U. S. DESTROYER IN TROUBLE IN BLACK SEA

Rumor of Distress Amid Blizzard Is Thought a Mistakes—Russian Ship Ashore.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 10.—The American destroyer Talbot was reported today in distress near Serpent's Island, in the Black Sea. It was thought, however, that the report might refer to the Talbot's standing by the British cruiser Ceres, which was towing a tanker and two tugs loaded with refugees from Odessa toward Constanza, Rumania, under bad weather conditions. A blizzard is general over the Black Sea.

The Russian steamer Gregorieff ran ashore near the Killia Life Saving Station at the Black Sea entrance to the Bosphorus. One hundred and fifty of her passengers were rescued in the raging storm through a line landed from the ship by a rocket, and efforts are continuing for the rescue of the 200 remaining passengers and crew. The Gregorieff is a 7,000-ton vessel. She left Odessa on Sunday.

Red Agitation in Macedonia.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Bolshevist demonstrations have occurred in Greek Macedonia and Saloniki, according to advices today to the State Department. That in Macedonia was during a railroad strike and the Bolshevist leaders were arrested. The demonstration in Saloniki followed a Socialist gathering. Two hundred men carrying red flags and shouting "vive Lenin" marched through the streets.

Lloyd George Refuses to Say Whether Grey Will Return

LONDON, Feb. 12.—Replying to a question in the House of Commons today as to whether Viscount Grey would return to Washington as British Ambassador, and if not who would be his successor, Premier Lloyd George said he was unable to make any statement on the subject.

DENIKIN'S FORCES PURSUED TO CRIMEA

EKATERINODAR'S FALL NEAR

No Trace Found of Kolchak When Irkutsk Was Recaptured from the Reds.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—The pursuit by the Bolsheviki of the remnants of General Denikin's forces into the Crimea, the launching of an expected Red attack on the North Russian front in the Dvina sector, and the conclusion of the Lettish operations against the Reds are pointed to by the military observers as the most salient developments of the past week's operations in Russia as reported to the War Office here.

On the western sector of the South Russian front the resistance of the volunteers against the Bolsheviki appears entirely to have collapsed with the Red occupation of Odessa. The Reds now are pushing toward the Dniester along a front of 120 miles.

The reports show that the Bolsheviki suffered disaster in their attempts to force the line of the Don and Manitch Rivers, having lost heavily in men killed or made prisoner. The Reds, however, are making rapid progress in the Steppes region, probably attracted by the possibility of occupying Sebastopol and Theodosia, Black Sea ports in the Crimea, and seizing the Petrovsk Railroad. The taking of this line would constitute a serious threat to the anti-Bolshevist communications with the volunteer fleet in the Caspian Sea, which has its base at Petrovsk.

A wireless dispatch from Moscow today says that the Whites are hurriedly evacuating Ekaterinodar, which is about to fall. Ekaterinodar, which was the headquarters of General Denikin before his great drive northward toward Moscow, is in Cisaucasia, about seventy-five miles from the Black Sea).

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—The new Revolutionary Government at Vladivostok is very friendly to the United States, Major General Graves, Commander of the American Expeditionary Forces in Siberia, informed the War Department today in a dispatch which also said that Vladivostok was quiet and there was apparently no desire for revenge on the part of the revolutionists. The Zemstvos are in full control, with Meviedeff as President, General Graves reported. The number of the revolutionists, including those at Vladivostok and Nikolsk, was estimated at 15,000.

HARBIN, Feb. 5.—A dispatch from Chita reports that the forces of General Kappell, Commander-in-Chief of the Western armies of the All-Russian Government, have joined with the Czechs recaptured Irkutsk and Cheremkova (eighty miles northwest of Irkutsk) and established contact with General Semenoff. General Kappell's forces found traces of Admiral Kolchak, former head of the All-Russian Government, whose fate is unknown, the dispatch adds.

WEYGAND DENOUNCES REDS.

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 11.—Just before leaving Paris for London to act as one of the advisers to Premier Millerand, General Weygand, Chief of Staff for Marshal Foch, gave THE NEW YORK TIMES a statement reflecting the attitude of Foch and himself towards any move which might arise at London looking to making peace with Soviet Russia. The French Government is today in accord with the attitude expressed by General Weygand.

"Bolshevism is an atrocious system," he said. "It is tyranny ten times worse than that of the Czar. You may say that I am implacably against this awful anarchy.

"I hear now that certain people are wishing to conclude an accord with Lenin, and I am astonished. Not only is it a shameful thing to make a compact with crime, but also it is foolish to think that the Soviets intend to sign real peace rather than a mere sham.

"People may say that economic and political reasons call for a conciliatory policy with regard to the Soviets. Well, I am not a political leader. I am not a political man at all, and do not understand politics. But I am a soldier and as a soldier I see that Bolshevism constitutes a grave military danger to my country. That is enough for me.

"The opinion of the French General Staff is unanimous on this point. I have the same ideas as Marshal Foch, and my colleagues are all of the same opinion as to Bolshevism."

GABY'S JEWELS TO FAMILY.

But She Left a Set of Diamonds to Harry Pilcer—Her Funeral Today.

Special Cable to The Chicago Tribune.

PARIS, Feb. 12.—The body of Gaby Deslys, whose real name was Madeline Caire, will be buried tomorrow from her luxurious apartment near the Bois de Boulogne. The body will be sent to Marseilles for interment in the family plot at the cemetery.

Mme. Caire, Gaby's mother, is seriously ill following her daughter's death, as she had been caring for Gaby night and day since her arrival at her bedside months ago. Gaby's sister, who lives in Syracuse, N. Y., also is ill with worry and strain.

Gaby left her valuable collection of jewels, including her famous pearls, to her mother and sister, but left isolated jewels to various friends. Harry Pilcer will receive a handsome set of diamonds. Various mannequins who tried out the wonderful toilettes in which Gaby astonished the theatregoers all were remembered for small legacies.

WITH WILSON ON TREATY.

McAdoo Denies Break Over Reservations—Opposes Amendments.

William G. McAdoo last night denied that he had disagreed with President Wilson over treaty reservations, as had been reported. At the New Star Casino, where he spoke on Lincoln at an entertainment and ball given by the Wichita Democratic Club, he said to newspaper men:

"I am with the President. I favor reservations, but not amendments; modifications, but not changes. I think they are getting nearer down in Washington and will reach a basis for agreement, an agreement which will prove satisfactory to the President."

Mr. McAdoo thought Senator Lodge's reservations needed further modification and were "too broad in scope and not reservations, but amendments."

ULTIMATE ADOPTION OF BONUS PLANNED

LIKEWISE A TRAINING BILL

Neither Measure Has Any Chance of Success This Session, the Leaders Say.

TRY FOR JUNE ADJOURNMENT

Effort Will Be Made to Clear Up All Appropriation Bills in Six Weeks.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Republican leaders today considered a plan for the ultimate adoption of universal military service and bonuses for the soldiers who fought abroad.

The House Steering Committee, worried by the opposition of the American Legion insisting upon registration for cumpulsory training and bonuses, agreed that the finances of the country did not justify Congress enacting this legislation at present.

In order to overcome the attitude of the Democrats, who in caucus declared against universal training, it was virtually decided by the Republican House leaders that they would pledge the party, so far as possible, to support both measures in the next Congress, when the revenues might permit of the expenditures, estimated at $1,000,000,000.

In anticipation of the visit, next Monday, of the executive officers of the American Legion, the Republican leaders have about decided to create a special committee which will study universal training and bonuses, and report the exact costs to the next Congress. Some of the leaders among the American Legion have assured Republican leaders that this will satisfy the Legion, officers of which have said that they were in sympathy with the policy of economy now necessary.

It was argued in the Steering Committee today that this plan would work satisfactorily, and in the end would meet with the approval of the country. It was pointed out that compulsory training would probably be defeated for all time if a measure were defeated in Congress this session, as is certain because of opposition on both sides. Many Congressmen are reported to be against such service purely for economical reasons, while it is apparent that much of the opposition is founded upon the policy itself.

The Republican leaders told their colleagues after the meeting of the Steering Committee today that bills for compulsory training and bonuses could not be forced through this Congress. Those who learned of the compromise plan expressed themselves as hopeful that it would be adopted.

While this subject formed the chief matter of discussion before the House Steering Committee's session, which lasted most of the day, other matters were considered. The Republican Senate Steering Committee joined in the morning session, and it was

MUSIC

By Richard Aldrich

The Philharmonic Society.

The Philharmonic Society observed Lincoln's Birthday at its concert in Carnegie Hall last evening by repeating the performance it gave last year on the same anniversary, of Rubin Goldmark's symphonic poem entitled "The Gettysburg Requiem." This was included in a program of which all the other numbers were selections from Wagner—"A Faust Overture" and a number of the preludes and scenes from the music dramas that are usually played in "Wagner programs."

Mr. Goldmark's composition made a deep impression, as it did on its first performance. The composer disavows an explicit program for his music, except in so far as the "Gettysburg Address" called up certain moods. There are five sections, played continuously. The character of the music is, in general, mournful. There is expression of grief over the fallen: there is a martial dirge-like theme; the conflict still raging (in November, 1863), is suggested by dissonant battle music. Aspiration and the hope of fulfillment is the burden of another section; there is a requiem passage, and at the close a trumpet proclamation intended to represent Lincoln's words on government.

Mr. Goldmark writes as a modern whose concern for euphony, clearness and directness of expression has not been absorbed by other considerations. His music is fluent, sincere, dignified, charged with expressiveness. His themes are cogent, of a large sweep of line. He writes with a genuinely symphonic development, and his treatment of the orchestra is rich and luminously colored.

Some might contend that in a composition of such length and amplitude there was too little differentiation of mood and color, too little contrast in the sections. The difficulty, if it be one, is, of course, inherent in the subject. Mr. Goldmark has made a noble and beautiful contribution illustrative of that subject; and to play the composition as a memorial of the day was a worthy and dignified act.

The composition was listened to with deep attention. There was much applause, and Mr. Stransky chivalrously directed it toward Mr. Goldmark, who sat in a box and bowed to acknowledge it.

The New York Symphony Society.

The New York Symphony Society's program for its concert yesterday afternoon in Carnegie Hall included César Franck's symphony, much played this season; the orchestral suite arranged from Ravel's ballet of "Daphnis et Chloe," and Tschaikovsky's violin concerto, played by Mr. Mischa Elman.

The concerto has been one of Mr. Elman's favorite pieces. He plays it now in a considerably more artistic manner than he did a few years ago; with more repose, with less of the appearance of display. His tone yesterday was extremely fine, his agility great. He mastered the manifold difficulties without apparent effort. There is a certain gypsylike bravura in his playing of the first movement, something extravagant that befits the music. The more musical and more poetical phrases of that movement and the canzonetta do not fare quite so well at his hands so far as their deeper musical values are concerned. One of the less desirable features of Mr. Elman's playing yesterday was a lack of a firm rhythm, a tendency to run away with the more brilliant passages, to clip the ends of their phrases. He was much applauded and several times recalled.

Miss Eva Gauthier's Recital.

Miss Eva Gauthier left Greenwich Village for a space on Wednesday afternoon to give a recital in Aeolian Hall of "vocal chamber music," by which was meant songs with the accompaniment of a small number of orchestral instruments, with, in some cases, the piano. She presented a program of music by some of the modern experimenters in the new effects, including three Americans—Winter Watts, Samuel Gardner and Bainbridge Crist. She began with four of Beethoven's arrangements of Irish, English and Scotch folk-songs, with accompaniment of piano, violin and 'cello; although the English specimen, "Sally in Our Alley," which Beethoven himself thought was a Scotch song, is not a folk-song, but the work of Henry Carey, and Carey wrote it with an accompaniment of his own.

Of the modern songs, Ernest Chausson's "Chanson Perpetuelle," with accompaniment of piano and string quartet, has the kind of glowing harmonic warmth that is remembered as his characteristic utterance. Thenceforward difficulties arose; as in Maurice Ravel's setting of verses by Mallarmé, accompanied by piccolo, flute, clarinets, string quartet and piano, in which the strings, playing in arpeggived harmonics gave the effect of suppressed squeaks, and the voice had little to say. Maurice Delage has made his setting of Heine's "Fir Tree" poem, with harp, wind and strings, a "Hindoo song," with some characteristic oriental melismas.

Four very short Russian songs, "Chansons Plaisantes," by Stravinsky, exemplified the fine flower of the composer's style. They are reminiscent of his three-string quartets once played here, not only in their melodic and harmonic style, their attempts at pictorial representation, but also in their brevity. They were found pleasant or unpleasant in accordance with the listener's attitude toward that sort of thing. The scoring, for flute, oboe, English horn, clarinet, bassoon and strings, gives the composer ample scope for instrumental pleasantries that sometimes escape the pounds of music.

A setting of a poem by Shelley most unsuited to music, by Respighi, followed. Of the American composers Mr. Gardner was represented by three poems of Oscar Wilde and Mr. Crist by five "Chinese Mother Goose Rhymes."

Miss Gauthier sang all these productions with an equal devotion, with a serious attempt at their interpretation, and with a sympathetic voice and style. How far she gained sympathy for some of her offerings was not certain.

The next lecture to be given under the auspices of the New York Drama League will be at the Garrick Theatre on Sunday at 8:30 P. M. Louis K. Anspacher will talk on "The Audience" to members and guests of the league.

"HERODIADE" REVIVED.

Massenet's Opera of the Herod Dynasty Sung by Chicago Company.

Massenet's "Herodiade," an opera in four acts and six scenes, opulent in perfumed music, heavy only with the languorous French manner of depicting the orchestral Orient, made an interesting diversion in the Chicago Opera Association's season at the Lexington last evening. Faint-hearted, less febrile stepsister to "Salome," this co-related work on the Herod dynasty had been chosen once to open a final year of Hammerstein's Manhattan on Nov. 8, 1909, when it was heard six times in all. The French wing of the late Mr. Campanini's forces obtained the present revival, and largely justified it, with a performance that brought something of operatic Paris, if not of Palestine, to momentary reality.

Of Strauss's inversion—tenor villain versus deep-voiced prophet in the well—there was nothing here; the bad, mad Herod was Maguenat, an accomplished baritone, as all les bons diables should be, while since John must speak from centre of stage a tenor he must be, though few persons knew which tenor last night. O'Sullivan's name was in the printed bill, but Charles Fontaine sang the part, and looked and acted the preacher.

Marguerite d'Alvarez returned as a richly Oriental Herodiade, the actual Herodias, whose evil heart feared John's reforms. Yvonne Gall was Salome, coolly curious about John, calculatingly brooding tragedy. Cotreuil as Phanuel, Nicolay as High Priest, Defrere, Mojica and Miss Follis sang, and Charlier conducted the artful climaxes and exotic dances.

At the Lexington matinée Alessandro Bonci resumed a rôle of his former Manhattan and Metropolitan years, that of Elvino in "L'Elisir d'Amore." His final solo of "The Furtive Tear" earned an ovation, as did his duets with Florence Macbeth, a charming new heroine, and with Trevisan, who made a personal success as the quack doctor. Rimini, Edna Darch and other assisted, and Mr. Marinuzzi at the baton shared honors of the matinée.

Philip Gordon Heard Again.

Philip Gordon, pianist, giving his second recital in Aeolian Hall yesterday afternoon, planned a program without Chopin, but made up for it by playing four of Chopin's études as encores. Mr. Gordon's fleet dexterity and rhythmic emphasis gave point to Beethoven's rondo "On a Lost Penny" and country dance, which was repeated. There were also Bach's "chromatic" fantasy, Liszt's St. Francis legends and Ravel's "Jeux d'eau."

THE PLAY

By Alexander Woollcott

Rachel Crothers, Herself.

HE AND SHE, a comedy in three acts by Rachel Crothers. At the Little Theatre.

Tom Herford	Cyril Keightley
Ann Herford	Rachel Crothers
Millicent Herford	Faire Binney
Daisy Herford	Margaret Johnson
Doctor Remington	Arthur Elliott
Keith MacKenzie	Fleming Ward
Ruth Creel	Ethel Cozzens
Miss	Frances Bryant

An alert and appreciative audience packed the Little Theatre last evening to witness a valiant and unusual undertaking by Rachel Crothers, when she, a woman known among us for many years as a playwright, ventured forth as an actress in the leading rôle of a tragi-comedy of her own writing. It is called "He and She," an interesting, thoughtful and provocative play, which covers much the same ground as "The Famous Mrs. Fair," and which the chief weakness lies in its tendency to relapse from the possibilities of a play to the inevitably lesser possibilities of a debate.

It is well cast and tasterfully mounted, with a special interest turning, naturally enough, on the emergence of Miss Crothers as an actress. The sufficiently known fact that this play was tried out by various actresses at different times and places, and that the author herself consented to play the leading rôle only because there seemed to be no easier way of securing for her work the hearing she knew it deserved, spares Miss Crothers from any air of proclaiming vaingloriously: "Behold me, presenting myself in my own play. Come one, come all." But it must be recorded that, whereas something is gained by thus bringing to "He and She" a performance so full of understanding and so free from theatricalised tricks, a good deal more is lost by her very obvious inexpertness.

It is somewhat evasive to call "He and She" a tragi-comedy, for such a classification is a mugwumpish position, midway between the two camps into which its audiences are sure to divide. Probably it would be as well to call it a tragedy and be done with it, for something fine and strong dies in the last act. It is the hope, the ambition and all the future work of a genius—deliberately slain, in order that the "she" of "He and She" may be able to play more attentively and more whole-heartedly what she is driven to regard as her more important rôle—that of wife and mother. For this play by Miss Crothers rehearses the tragedy of the new woman, with her longing for a creative career and the obligations of her home warring within her.

It is very clearly Miss Crothers's point, not quite conclusively illustrated, let us admit, that a woman cannot double satisfactorily in these two rôles. Those who take their plays on the run will be likely to assume hastily that she thinks further that a woman would do better to chose the domestic existence, but Miss Crothers hardly says that, for the woman in her play is already a wife and mother, already under moral contract to play that rôle as well as it can be played. The author of "He and She" would probably say that, as to which road a woman should take, it depends on the woman, and that there are enough women in the world to keep both roads fairly congested.

All points of view are fairly well presented in the course of the play. Therein, indeed, lies its chief weakness. Unlike Mr. Forbes, Miss Crothers has not been content to tell her simple, moral-straught story about the mother so engrossed in her career that her husband becomes jealous and her daughter runs wild. She has also worked in an old-fashioned doctor with scriptural maxims about the Creator's intentions for the male and the female; a young fellow, yearning for a little homebody to keep his flat; a stenographer, who prays secretly for the Lord to bring her a husband in order that she may quit her lonesome job, and a young magazine woman whose thrilling appointment to an editorial staff (from some unexplained but sexually enough, apparently lower position) banishes from her thought all schemes for "unbounded domesticity."

Thus is the play concentrated like a battery of guns upon the single question. Hardly a line is spoken, and only a silent maidservant is introduced, except as the discussion can be thereby illustrated. Much of the time, therefore, "He and She" seems peopled less with folks than with embodied points of view, and the play seems less a dramatic story than a symposium. Well, that is one kind of play, as Mr. Shaw would be the first to admit, but it is not the best kind, as Miss Crothers herself would be the last to deny.

Enough has been said to show the kinship between "He and She" and the bouncing success at Henry Miller's Theatre. Wherefore, it should be explained that Miss Crothers is free from any suspicion of having dashed home and written her play the night of Mr. Forbes's première. "He and She" was written and published some years ago and the changes made in it since are not material changes.

The performance is of a mixed quality. There are times when Miss Crothers gives the rôle some very illuminating touches, but she mumbles painfully and she plays many scenes with an unbridled emotionalism, too suggestive of a body being discovered or a throat being cut.

Probably she was not at her best on a nervous first night. Mr. Keightley is admirable as He, with Fleming Ward and Arthur Elliott rather taking second honors, though both Margaret Johnson and Faire Binney are often very delightful indeed, little Miss Binney cutting loose amid all the rest in the luxury of playing not a point of view at all, but just a person.

at this story of an obscure Irish plumber, living in poverty on the East Side of New York, whom Fate suddenly transforms into an international adventurer!

Romance positively pounced on Bill Grogan, erstwhile builder of pipes, drains and dreams, and carried him all over the world.

Bill Grogan should not have fallen in love, for with Paradise almost within his arms, the Gates of Hell flew open on a certain never-to-be-forgotten night in Singapore! The result was—

REPUBLICAN WOMEN LAUD WADSWORTH

Their Votes Are Needed, Senator Tells Club at Lincoln Day Luncheon.

UPHOLDS FIGHT ON LEAGUE

Declares Also Against Permitting Any Group of Workers to Dominate Government.

Senator James W. Wadsworth, Jr., will receive the support of many Republican women for renomination and re-election, despite the opposition of woman suffrage leaders, if the enthusiastic reception accorded him yesterday at the Lincoln Day luncheon of the Woman's Republican Club at Delmonico's furnished any indication.

The Senator was the princpal speaker. Mrs. James Grisold Wentz, President of the club, referred to him as the leader of the Republican Party in New York State, and declared that it was up to the Republican woman to see that there continued to be two Republican Senators from New York. Mrs. Wentz referred indirectly to the League of Women Voters, the New York City Chairman of which, Miss Mary Garrett Hay, is leading the fight against Senator Wadsworth, and said that there never should be a woman's party for anything. "Get out of all outside parties and get into the Republican Party," she said.

Miss Helen Varick Boswell, Chairman of the women's division of the New York County Republican Committee, declared that the party was fortunate in having men of principle and conviction like Senator Wadsworth in office. "There can be no resentment for bygones in politics," she said, with reference to the opposition to Senator Wadsworth because of his vote against the Federal woman suffrage amendment. About four hundred women were present and they paid Senator Wadsworth the unusual tribute of rising both at the beginning and end of his speech.

Senator Wadsworth, asserting that the Republican Party had saved the union in 1861 and had again saved the country from financial disaster in 1896, declared that it had saved the nation for the third time within the last five months by refusing to bind the future generation of Americans to participation in all future wars.

Senator Wadsworth caused a ripple of laughter by addressing the women present as "my fellow Republicans," and by referring to the fact that they now have the vote.

Women's Votes Needed, He Says.

"Let me say this, while I am on the subject of women voting," he said. "Our country, and not only our party, will need the vote and active influence of every woman voter in the campaign we will be facing within the next few months. If there is one thing that is dangerous to a self-governing people, it is indifference on the part of any considerable part of its electorate."

Senator Wadsworth said that under our system of Government, the American people had been encouraged to be a self-reliant people. "The principal dangers facing us today," he said, "come from those proposals which seek to take away from the American people their self-reliance, and substitute a tendency to depend upon some higher or remote power. That is the evil of the socialistic system. Under the guise of doing something for the great masses of the people, it is proposed to create a condition that will ultimately prevent these great masses of the people from doing anything for themselves."

Senator Wadsworth said that several lessons of the desirability of self-reliance had been taught in the period during and after the war. "As a result," he continued, "we are going to turn the railroads back to the old management. We have learned that no Government can know more about a business than those engaged in business for a living."

Referring to the impossibility of permitting any group of workers in essential industries dominating the Government, Senator Wadsworth said that this country could not permit any such group to accomplish their special purposes at the expense of the rest of the people.

Says Party Has Saved Country.

In insisting upon Americanizing reservations to the covenant of the League of Nations, the Republican Party had again saved the country, Senator Wadsworth declared. "The Republican Party saved the nation from a proposal which, if adopted, would have meant that the American people of the future would have had no choice between right and wrong in international affairs," he said, "and would have nullified the Constitution by taking from Congress the right to declare war."

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler gave an address on Abraham Lincoln, and said that his birthday, along with that of Washington, was celebrated, not because of his personal qualities of courage, sympathy and sagacity, but because he stood for a great principle.

Mrs. Douglas Robinson, sister of the late Theodore Roosevelt, said that she believed Colonel Roosevelt's name had a right to be remembered at a Lincoln Day banquet, because there never was a greater lover of Lincoln.

Speeches were made by Ogden L. Mills, former State Senator; Surrogate George A. Slater of Westchester County, George A. Glynn, Chairman of the Republican State Committee, and Samuel S. Koenig, Chairman of the Republican County Committee. Miss Amelia Bingham delivered a recitation. The guests of the club included the Presidents of twenty-one women's organizations and Mrs. Arthur L. Livermore, woman State Chairman.

HARVARD LOSES BEQUEST.

Court Invalidates Provision of Miss Emma F. Cary.

Supreme Court Justice Davis has decided, in a suit to determine the distribution of part of the estate of Henry Cary, who died in New York City in 1857, that Harvard College will not receive a contingent bequest of one twenty-eighth of the Cary estate provided in the will of Miss Emma F. Cary, a beneficiary.

Miss Cary, who died in Massachusetts in 1918, gave a fifth of her share of the Cary estate in trust to Elizabeth Cary Ford, but provided that if she left no children the principal was to go to Harvard College. Mrs. Ford left no children.

Miss Cary directed that three-fourths of the income was to go to the undergraduate, who was a candidate for the bachelor's degree in Harvard College, and who, whether in need of assistance or not, at the completion of his first two years of college work, appeared to the President of Harvard to have made the most distinguished record in scholarship. Miss Cary directed that the remaining fourth of the income be used to buy books on Greek literature for Harvard.

The Trustees under the Henry Cary will contended Miss Cary's exercise of the power of appointment over the share of the Henry Cary will is invalid, and that the bequest goes to nephews and nieces. Justice Davis holds that the clause in favor of Harvard College must be declared invalid. The amount of the bequest to Havard was not disclosed.

POLICE AWARDS BARRED.

Excluded from Workmen's Compensation, Appeals Court Decides.

The Court of Appeals has decided that a New York City policeman is not entitled to recover an award from the City under the Workmen's Compensation law merely because while attempting to adjust an electric light bulb in the station house he fell through a box on which he was standing. The award was obtained in the lower courts by Cornelius Ryan, a patrolman, on the ground that he was performing the duty of turnkey janitor, and that these are occupations which receive compensation.

Judge Cardozo, who wrote the opinion, pointed out that patrolmen are excluded from the benefits of the law because they receive independent compensation for injury or death under a separate provision of the City Charter. The court said:

"One might as well say that an officer assigned to duty in a mounted squad is a hostler. If the theory of the petitioner had been adopted the officer who battles with a burglar would be excluded and the one who spends his days in the shelter of the station has been singled out for protection."

LEAGUE OF NATIONS PLEA.

Letters of Slain Y.M.C.A. Secretary Tell of World's Need of America.

Hope that the United States will not refuse to join the League of Nations is expressed in letters from James Perry, a Y. M. C. A. secretary, made public yesterday by the American Commission for Relief in the Near East. Mr. Perry, as related in a dispatch to THE NEW YORK TIMES on Sunday, was one of two American employes of the commission killed by Turkish brigands near Aintab, Syria, while conducting a motor truck convoy of relief supplies.

Mr. Perry leaves a widow, who was Miss Marjorie E. Witter of Boston, and two children, in Constantinople. In his letters, which were written shortly before his death to his brother-in-law, the Rev. T. V. Witter of Chicago, Mr. Perry said he would doubt that the Allies had won the war if the United States did not become a member of the League of Nations. "It will be a German victory," he said, "for, unless the League of Nations functions by the end of the year, who will prevent the nations, large and small, from falling back into their interminable petty jealousies and struggles?"

Asks $1 Cable Address Registry.

The refusal of cable companies to lower the annual charge of $2.50 for registering abbreviated cable addresses in a central bureau to $1 at the request of the Merchants' Association, has led this organization to ask the Interstate Commerce Commission to investigate the reasonableness of the charge, it was announced yesterday.

WADSWORTH BOWS TO WOMEN AND DRYS

Drops Opposition to Suffrage and Prohibition; Both Closed Incidents, Says Senator.

CANNOT FIGURE IN CAMPAIGN

Believes In Upholding Constitution and Voted for Volstead Act, He Asserts.

Friends of woman suffrage and prohibition need fear no further opposition from Senator James W. Wadsworth, Jr. Both subjects are closed incidents so far as he is concerned, he declared yesterday. With prohibition already a part of the Constitution of the United States and woman suffrage apparently about to be made so, thirty States having already ratified the amendment, the Senator does not see how either can figure to any extent in the State or national campaign this Fall.

Senator Wadsworth, who came to New York yesterday to make a speech at the Women's Republican Club Lincoln Day luncheon, said he had opposed both woman suffrage and prohibition because he believed they should have been submitted to the people of each State to vote upon them, but that since suffrage had passed the Senate and prohibition had become a part of the Constitution, neither the Senate nor any individual Senator had any further concern in either matter.

"Are you still opposed to woman suffrage?" Senator Wadsworth was asked.

"Well, I haven't been converted to it yet," he replied. "But it will soon be in the same position as prohibition. I opposed both reforms, but I believe in upholding the Constitution. I voted for the Volstead Enforcement act because I believe that, having passed prohibition, Congress should have the power to provide for its enforcement. It is unlikely that the present Congress will make any changes in the terms of enforcement. The plan should be tried out before any changes are made. The question is still before the courts in many forms, and it may be that in the process of evolution some plan may be reached that will be satisfactory to the overwhelming majority of the people."

The Senator intimated that in his campaign for renomination and re-election he did not expect either the suffrage or the prohibition issue would be brought to the front, despite the declaration of Miss Mary Garrett Hay that she would oppose the Senator in the primary and, if he was nominated, at the election, and regardless of the fact that the Anti-Saloon League has been attacking him because of his stand on prohibition.

Regarding National politics, Senator Wadsworth declared that he did not believe the League of Nations would figure largely in the Republican campaign, as he thought the peace treaty would be signed and disposed of this month.

"I believe the peace treaty will go through shortly with the Lodge reservations or their clear equivalent," said the Senator.

"Do you think Herbert C. Hoover will be nominated by the Republicans at Chicago?" Senator Wadsworth was asked.

"I don't believe there is a chance of it," he replied. "Of course, a great deal of Hoover talk is being heard, but the Republicans will not nominate him

What the Democrats will do is a different matter."

"What candidate will the New York Republican delegation support?" he was asked.

"Nicholas Murray Butler will have many friends among the delegates," the Senator replied, "and he will receive their support but I think the vast majority of the delegates will go to the convention uninstructed."

The Senator returned to Washington at midnight.

GAS APPEAL UP APRIL 12.

Corporation Counsel Burr Explains Status of 80-Cent Fight.

Corporation Counsel Burr said yesterday that his appeal from the decision of the Federal Court denying the city leave to intervene in the suit of the Consolidated Gas Company to have the 80-cent law declared unconstitutional, would be argued before the United States Supreme Court on April 12.

If the city wins the appeal the proceedings before Special Master Abraham S. Gilbert, who was appointed by the court to take testimony, will be nullified and the proceedings will have to be begun again just as if the suit were a new one.

Raw Silk Markets Quiet.

The Yokohama raw silk market is quiet and lifeless, with prices nominally about 300 yen per picul below the point they stood a week or so ago. Stocks continue light there, according to information received by H. L. Gwalter & Co., being reported at 9,500 bales. A large part of this silk is unfit for export. The Canton market is also quiet, but prices are firm. Old silks are very scarce there, but new silks for May-August shipment can be had at prices 5 per cent. under those asked for old stock. Shanghai continues strong, with holders refusing concessions. Business is curtailed by a further advance in silver exchange. Italian silks are quiet at Milan, and prices, which had advanced sharply, have eased off somewhat. The local market continues quiet and depressed. Considerable declines in prices took place during the last week without attracting buyers. Business is quite generally hampered by delays in transmitting cable messages.

HOLIDAY LULL IN PHONE USE

Company Hopeful of Public Co-operation—Fewer Operators Ill.

On account of the holiday it was impossible to ascertain yesterday whether the public had responded to the appeal of J. S. McCulloh, Commercial Vice President of the New York Telephone Company, to refrain from making non-essential telephone calls.

"But I may say that I think I have seen a hopeful indication that the public is disposed to co-operate with us until this emergency is over," said Mr. McCulloh. "We had predicted an unusual increase in the number of calls, as is always the case on a day preceding a holiday, and while the volume was tremendous, we did not experience the anticipated pre-holiday increase. And today, being a holiday, there has been a great decrease in the number of calls.

"We are further encouraged by the return of many of our operators who have been ill. The percentage of these returns was higher yesterday than it has been in the last two weeks. Perhaps, within a week or ten days the number of our absent operators may be cut in half, but it should be borne in mind that there is always an absent percentage because of sickness."

Will the Consumer Have to Pay?

The question of who will absorb the 15 per cent. increase in wages recently granted the cloak and suit workers by Governor Smith's committee is attracting quite a little attention in the ready-to-wear trade these days. The agreement arrived at included a speeding up on the part of the workers that would automatically absorb the advance but, from all accounts, signs of this speeding up have as yet failed to materialize. In view of the present rather uncertain outlook for business in ready-made garments manufacturers are complaining that they cannot assume the burden, and the retailers also seem to be having troubles of their own. Because of this, any failure of the workers to keep their part of the agreement is likely to result in the advance being quietly passed on to the consumer.

TO RESIST PAPER ORDER.

Canadian Firm Refuses to Sell at Government Prices.

MONTREAL, Feb. 12.—Price Bros. & Co., of Quebec, who have been shipping large quantities of news print paper into the American market, have decided to resist the order of the Board of Commerce requiring them to supply paper at Government-fixed prices to the Montreal Daily Star, Montreal Herald and Poirier, Bessette & Co., of Montreal, it was announced today.

The order was to have gone into effect Feb. 10, but no deliveries have been made and the company announced it did not contemplate making any.

The board is said to possess various methods of enforcing its orders, including the imposition of fines and imprisonment on those who refuse to obey.

Overcoats Up 20 Per Cent.

Despite the surplus of some sorts of overcoats in the local market, most of the manufacturers see no depressing effect on future prices as a result. According to those well informed on the situation, an increase of 20 per cent. will be shown on overcoat lines for next Fall and Winter. The surpluses existing at present are chiefly of the cheaper grades of men's outer garments. In the higher grade styles there is said to be no abundance of merchandise, and it is these grades, manufacturers insist, that are most readily marketed at present. Medium-priced overcoatings, however, are meeting with a better demand from the clothiers, and this is taken as a sign that some made-up garments using these fabrics may be provided next Fall instead of just the two extremes of grade that were mainly offered during the present season. Another angle of the overcoat situation is the competition that may be offered to domestic lines by English manufacturers next Fall.

BUSINESS WORLD

Piece Goods Sales Increasing.

The old adage about the loss to one being the gain to another is working out in the case of sales of the ready-to-wear departments of the retail stores and those of the piece goods department. It is quite generally admitted that the high prices asked for the former merchandise are diverting sales to the latter, albeit they also cost more than they used to by a good deal. While the Spring season is young yet at retail, sales of silks over the counter are said to be showing a tremendous gain over last year, with this true, to a somewhat lesser extent, of woolen dress goods. With Paris smiling on fine cottons, the same thing is expected in them a little later on. The reason, of course, is that a constantly growing number of women are finding that, by buying their cloth and making it up—or having it made up—they can get as good a garment for less money, or a better one for the same money, than if they bought their stuff ready made.

Will Allot Rugs for Fall.

Allotment lists covering the Fall production of the mills represented by the wholesale department of W. & J. Sloane of this city have been sent to the wholesale trade. They cover the coming season's output of McCleary, Wallin & Crouse, the Shuttleworth Brothers Company, C. H. Masland & Sons, and the Willow Grass Rug Company. The lists give the maximum quantities allotted, the goods to be shipped by the mills between April 1 and Sept. 30. With them was sent out a running list of patterns and sizes. Terms, prices, and conditions of sale will be announced on or about April 1, according to the accompanying letter. Orders will be accepted subject to approved credit—free on board mill—and the mills' ability to ship the goods as manufactured between April 1 and Sept. 30. All unfilled orders now on the books will be canceled on March 31. Confirmation of allotments, with detailed specifications, must be in the hands of the Sloane wholesale department prior to Feb. 25.

Clothing Manufacturers to Meet.

The annual convention of the National Association of Clothiers will be held at the Hotel Astor next Tuesday and Wednesday. Morning and afternoon sessions are scheduled for the first day and morning and evening meetings for the second. At the evening session the speakers will be William M. Wood of the American Woolen Company, John Moody of Moody's Magazine, Dr. Aubrey Eaton, an industrial expert, and Dr. Royal S. Copeland, Health Commissioner of this city. Owing to the many problems confronting the industry and awaiting a general decision by the manufacturers, a full attendance of the membership is anticipated.

Textiles and Yarns For Sale.

The Surplus Property Division of the War Department is offering large quantities of textiles and yarn at a sale to be concluded on March 1. The textiles include duck, sheeting, jerkin lining and twills. More than half a million pounds of worsted yarn are offered, and almost a quarter of a million pounds of cotton yarns. The sale will be conducted through negotiation, and informal bids on the merchandise will be accepted up to 3 o'clock of the afternoon the sale closes. No special bid form is necessary. Samples may be inspected at any of the Zone Supply Offices.

What Will Be the Effect?

Wonder is expressed in certain quarters of the local gray goods trade as to just what will be the effect on the prices of men's collars of what is considered reckless buying of the unfinished cloths that go into them on the part of one of the big manufacturing concerns this week. This concern is charged with having bought two constructions of 39-inch printcloths at a full cent a yard above the price it could have got the goods for, and can still get them. It is further charged that this is the first time buying of this kind has been done. A year or more ago the concern in question bought 39-inch 72-76s at a quarter of a cent a yard more than the general market price, and is said also more recently to have duplicated its "cent high" buying of the last few days. With rumors of further advances in collar prices in the air, the question as to whether the public will have to foot the bill is attracting some attention in the trade.

Getting the Children's Trade.

Following the success of several large stores in putting in features that appeal to children, one of the leading department stores now has installed a barber's shop for children that has many new ideas. The store barber's shop is not, of course, a novelty, but the newly established barbering parlor has been well planned to make the children regard a visit as a joy and not something to be avoided. The chairs are hobby horses. In connection with the shop is a playroom with such entertainment devices as a toboggan slide.

An Experimental Station.

A clothing manufacturer discussing the local labor situation described the New York market as an "experimental station." The other markets, he explained, may be expected to get their share of labor troubles, now that the workers' organizations have strengthened themselves through the rest of the country. He said the local trade, however, has had to work out the labor problem with the result that the other markets will have a fairly clean-cut proposition to consider. Once the burden of labor adjustment passes from this to other clothing centres, he predicts that New York will go a long way toward regaining its supremacy as the leading market.

THINK WALTERS BILL WILL RAISE FARES

City Officials Believe Measure Is Likely to Increase Rates in Every Borough.

BURR SOUNDS A WARNING

Says City Should Have Controlling Voice in Expenditures Under Proposed Plan.

The bill which Senator Walters is to introduce in the Legislature providing that the fare to be charged on transportation lines in the cities of the State shall be sufficient to pay operating costs plus dividends, interested officials of this city yesterday because it was construed as a forecast of an increase in fares in all of the boroughs. Corporation Counsel Burr said that the bill would undoubtedly solve a very perplexing problem providing its provisions met with the approval of the city administration.

"The plan as outlined in newspaper reports," said Mr. Burr, "merely states that the gross earnings of the companies shall be administered by a special commission appointed by the city, that if the earnings exceed the outlays the surplus will serve to reduce the fare to five cents, and presumably less. This is interesting, for of course the bill will provide that this city shall have a controlling voice in expenditures. Otherwise there never would be any surplus.

"The Interborough, for instance, might have another epidemic of bonus-giving, or of salary raises, with the result that the only thing the city could confidently look forward to would be a steady increase in the fare. It would be fine for the companies if they were assured that the people would pay enough fare to meet all the costs of operation which the company alone would fix, as well as good dividends. So it appears to be certain that the Legislature, desiring to pass a bill that will conserve the interests of the people of this city, will see to it that the city shall have the power to place a restraining hand on any attempted orgy of money-spending."

Expect Governor's Co-operation.

Mr. Burr stated that the city administration felt secure in the belief that Governor Smith would not approve any measure affecting the interest of this city, even if it was of a general character, without the approval of the city administration. He said that the drafting of such a bill as that suggested by Senator Walters would take some time.

"It should be drawn," he said, "after conferences between representatives of the city, the traction companies and the Legislature. There would be many things to adjust before the city could properly agree to such a measure.

"One of the adjustments would have to occur in regard to the lease by the Interborough of the Manhattan Elevated lines, which now calls for a rental of 7 per cent. on an arbitrary valuation of $60,000,000. The Interborough has spent about $47,000,000 in third tracking the lines and in extending them. Under the lease there is no end to this payment of the 7 per cent. dividend. The city would probably insist upon a time limit, after the expiration of which the city would get possession of the property.

"Another adjustment would have to take place in reference to the trolley lines of the Interborough in Queens, and perhaps the most important adjustment would come when the task of shaking the water out of the various traction companies was taken up. This would be absolutely necessary, because it would be manifestly unfair to ask the people to pay a fare big enough to pay dividends on gross overvaluations."

Mr. Burr expressed doubt as to the wisdom of bunching all of the trolley lines in the State together, because the situation in each city might be found to be vastly different. He said that he was quite sure that no other city in the State faced as difficult a traction problem as this city. He expressed doubt as to the efficiency or far-sightedness of certain official and private bodies which have been engaged at various times during the last two years in discussing the problem as it exists here.

Expert Report Criticized.

"Take the report of Stone and Webster for instance in regard to the New York Railways Company," he said. "According to the figures of these experts employed by the Federal Court, the property of the company is worth millions more since it went into the hands of a receiver than it was worth when it was still solvent."

According to the figures referred to by Mr. Burr the value of the property of the New York Railways Company before the war was worth $88,098,970 and after the war, $144,055,177. Mr. Burr said that these figures always made him smile, which helped to strike a balance with the many things relating to the traction lines which made him angry.

"It will be necessary," explained Mr. Burr, "to make any bill providing for the settlement of the traction difficulty, complete in every particular. Therefore the bill of Senator Walters must have taken considerable study to perfect. So far as I know the assistance or advice of any representative of the city government in framing it has not been sought or given."

Concerning the inquiry into the traction situation which Mr. Burr is making for the Board of Estimate, he said:

"The inquiry will be ended before the Legislature adjourns. It is not the intention of the board to delve into matters disclosed in previous investigations any further than is necessary to bring into clearer light new matters which have never before been inquired into. The facts already brought out emphasizes in my opinion the need of care in drawing any measure to help the companies out of their financial difficulties, to the common end of protecting the interests of the public and the conservation of the traction properties that are worth saving."

2,500,000,000 Francs

Belgian Government 5% Internal Premium Loan

THESE bonds are payable by the Belgian Government in francs. In addition to the interest return and their redemption at a premium, they offer the American investor the possibility of a substantial profit through an appreciation in the value of the Belgian franc in the exchange market.

Coupon Bonds

Interest from May 15, 1920, payable May 15, and November 15

Redeemable within 75 years by annual drawings at 150% (750 francs for each 500 franc Bond)

The Government has the option of retiring the entire issue after May 15, 1940 at a reduced premium

Drawings March 1, 1921, and annually thereafter

Premium and interest payable without deduction for any Belgian taxes, present or future

Under provisions of the Peace Treaty and related agreements, the Belgian Government is to be relieved of practically its entire war debt incurred prior to the Armistice. In addition, it is to receive the first 2,500,000,000 francs of payments from the German reparation, to be applied in part toward liquidation of advances made to Belgium by Allied Governments since the Armistice. The Peace Treaty indicates the purpose, through reparation payments, to restore Belgium to her pre-war financial, industrial, and economic position. The diversified Belgian industry is rapidly regaining its normal production, which should enable Belgium to resume her prominent place in world trade.

Without attempting to predict the future course of the market in Belgian exchange, it is logical to expect that the restoration of industry in Belgium and the increase in its exports will tend to improve its trade balance, and therefore its exchange position.

At the present rate of Belgian exchange (February 11th, 13.50 to the dollar), a 500-franc bond would cost about $37.00, and with francs at the mint par of exchange, 5.18½ francs to the dollar, a 500-franc bond at par would be worth about $96.50.

SUBSCRIPTIONS will be received, subject to confirmation and allotment, on behalf of our Brussels Office for the account of the Belgian Government, at any of our offices, on and after February 13, 1920; books close in Belgium March 6, 1920.

Price, 499 francs per 500 franc bond

Subscribers may make payment in full at time of subscription or in two instalments, as follows: 100 francs at time of subscription; 399 francs on May 15, 1920. Payments shall be made to us in Belgian francs. We are prepared to purchase francs for the subscriber at current rates of exchange.

In order to simplify the collection of coupons and principal, bonds may be held in custody at our Brussels Office, and the amounts collected with respect to interest and principal remitted by check to holder, or deposited to his account. A nominal charge will be made for this service. Receipts of Guaranty Trust Company of New York will be delivered against payment and bonds in temporary or permanent form will be delivered if, when, and as issued and received from our Brussels Office.

OUR BANKING POWER NOW $45,000,000,000

Controller Williams Reports No Failures for National Banks in Year Ended Oct. 31.

URGES CREDITS TO EUROPE

Says If We Received All the Gold in the World It Would Be Only 40 Per Cent. of Trade Balance.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—John Skelton Williams, the Controller of the Currency, in his annual report submitted today to the Senate, showed that the national banks of the United States have in the last fiscal year exceeded all previous records, and "have measured fully up to the extraordinary demands which have been made upon them in a very trying period."

There was not a dollar loss to any depositor for the twelve months ended Oct. 31, 1919, the Controller states, and for the twenty-two months from Jan. 1, 1918, to Nov. 1, 1919, there was but one small national bank failure in the entire country involving loss to depositors. This record, the Controller shows, is thirty times, or 3,000 per cent., better than the yearly average for the forty-year period prior to 1914. During the fiscal year ended Oct. 31, 1919, there were failures of forty-five State banks, private banks and trust companies in nineteen States.

The Controller shows that the banking power of this country is now over $45,000,000,000, three times as much as the grand total of banking power of the world in 1890, as estimated by Mulhall.

He points out that the volume of the country's business during the last year, and its present activity, cannot be properly gauged by the totals of bank clearings; and that while the volume of transactions, as expressed in dollars and cents, has exceeded all previous records, "the unpleasant fact remains that in the last twelve months, when the obvious duty which confronted our whole people was to bend every effort toward not only continuing at full speed at the high point of production previously reached for all essential products, and where possible to increase our output to supply the needs of other countries, we have in some directions slowed down and radically reduced the output of mines and factories."

He contends that the country is far richer when it produces 40,000,000 tons of steel, even though it be sold at $30, with a margin of $3 per ton profit to the producer, than when the production is only 30,000,000 tons, sold at $40, with a margin of $13 a ton profit to the producer.

Shows Payment in Gold Impossible.

"The impossibility of demanding payment in gold for all the goods shipped to Europe," he says, "will be realized vividly when we remember that all the gold coin and gold bullion in the world, aside from the three or three and a quarter billion dollars we hold in the United States, is estimated at scarcely $6,000,000,000. Therefore, all of that remaining world stock of gold would not be sufficient to pay this country, if it should all be sent to us, which is, of course, unthinkable—more than 40 per cent. of the credit balance of trade we accumulated against the rest of the world in the six years since January, 1914, and the greater portion of which Europe still owes us, as expressed in the obligaions of foreign Governments now held by the United States.

"Apparently the only solution of the problem is to find some way by which we may furnish the European countries with which we desire to trade the crude materials and machinery which their people need, so that they may convert by the application of human skill and energy the raw products into finished fabrications and merchandise worth from ten to a thousand times the value of the raw material."

The Controller declares he would be derelict in his duty if he failed to add facts which show that our present prosperity may become largely artificial and end in disaster unless we as a people use the sagacity and foresight of the business man who protects and helps an embarrassed creditor having good prospects for restoration and future success.

"When the millions of European workers get back to their normal occupations, and with the necessary machinery and raw materials again begin to produce on a pre-war scale, they may make good the colossal waste of the four years of war with a rapidity which may happily astonish the most optimistic of us.

"Europe's surplus investable income before the war was estimated at four or five billion dollars per annum; and those countries may before long begin to discharge their war debt on a scale which few now dare to dream of."

The Controller suggests that the bankers of the country are now in position to be of tremendous help in restraining the riot of speculation in commodities as well as securities, and in getting things down to a sound and solid basis.

Gives Means to Relieve Exchange.

In discussing the foreign exchange situation the Controller says:

"The quotations for foreign exchange represents nothing but the depreciation in value of paper currency of foreign countries. The only way to bring foreign exchange back to the old gold parity is to re-establish the credit of foreign countries. This should be done—

"(1.) By putting the millions of working men and women back to work, so that human energy may be fully utilized in increased production and the creation of wealth.

"(2.) By thrift, economy, and saving—to widen the margin between the cost of living and the wealth created.

"(3). By avoidance by foreign nations of purchase and importation of luxuries, and by the refusal even to import essentials when these can be produced at home.

"(4). By every possible effort to increase the production abroad of those things for which a market can be found in this country; and at the present prices prevailing here the list of such articles is long and extensive."

Among other recommendations, the Controller asks that national banks be authorized under proper restrictions to establish branches, that officers and employes of national banks be required to give surety bonds; that a penalty be prescribed for making false financial statements as a basis for loans. Another recommendation would limit investments which a national bank may make in bank building. Excessive investments of this kind, the Controller says, have proved the cause of many bank failures in the past.

1919 Oil Output Sets Record.

OIL CITY, Pa., Feb. 12.—Oil production in the United States during 1919 was 366,255,611 barrels, an increase of more than 24,000,000 barrels over the previous year, according to the annual review of The Oil City Derrick, made public today. The 1919 report is a new high record in the annual petroleum output of the United States, according to the review.

Prices Irregular at Wool Sale.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—The offerings at the wool auction sales today amounted to 9,300 bales. Prices moved irregularly. Greasy grades were firm while inferior crossbreds were withdrawn.

A 5,000 Year Old Industry

MORE than 5,000 years ago the art of silk culture and weaving was discovered in China. Its early development was the occupation of royalty and its secrets were jealously guarded. To-day that ancient art is one of the world's most important industries.

As 5,000 years ago, fine silken fabrics to-day originate in China. Production methods, however, lag far behind the age. Machinery for this and other developments is in urgent demand. It is American ingenuity and American products that will aid in bringing China eventually into its own.

Our branches at Shanghai and elsewhere in the Orient, at Yokohama and Tokio, are at your disposal for active cooperation in assisting in the development of the rich markets of the Far East. Other branches at Seattle and San Francisco in the United States and Paris, France.

FIGHT ONE-WAY PLAN FOR FIFTH AVENUE

G. P. Foute Says Merchants and Their Customers Oppose New Traffic Rules.

REMEDIES ARE OFFERED

President of Bus Lines Proposes Ways to Relieve Traffic—Predicts Worse Snarl.

Objections to the plan to alter Fifth Avenue's traffic scheme next Monday, as announced recently in THE NEW YORK TIMES, developed yesterday on the ground that the proposed change was impracticable and that it did not have the full support of the avenue's merchants.

"I am so opposed to the scheme of making Fifth Avenue a one-way southbound thoroughfare," declared G. P. Foute of Underwood & Underwood, Inc., 417 Fifth Avenue, "that I want to make a protest. Of all the illogical, impracticable plans proposed, this, in my opinion, is the worst, and I believe that not only the Fifth Avenue merchants, but their patrons and those who reach them by the Fifth Avenue buses are not in favor of this plan.

"Personally, I do not believe that this will be a solution to the matter of congestion during the rush hours, and certainly not as long as they permit trucks, milk wagons, ice wagons, coal wagons and automobiles to stand for hours on both sides of Fifth Avenue. They should be compelled to remain on the side streets during the rush hours of both the morning and evening."

Mr. Foute gave out a letter he had received on the subject from John A. Ritchie, President of the Fifth Avenue Coach Co., in which the letter declared that the southbound one-way plan would not work out satisfactorily. In its place, Mr. Ritchie suggested:

"(a) Removal of the parking spaces in Park Avenue, thus opening a wider channel for traffic there instead of Fifth Avenue.

"(b) All excavations to be confined to the early hours of the night and to be temporarily boarded over so that traffic may cross over such excavations at all other times. Many times excavations are open on Fifth Avenue which, although only a few feet wide, clog up that particular point, and this, in turn, backs up traffic so that it is tied up for a considerable distance.

"(c) Horse-drawn vehicles to be excluded from Fifth Avenue. A slow-moving horse-drawn cruising hack or horse-drawn delivery wagon has the same effect upon traffic on the avenue as has a hand lathe on the production in a well regulated and modern equipped machine shop. It slows everything up to its own speed.

"(d) Cruising hacks and taxis to be better controlled. They stop short anywhere to pick up fares. They often turn in the middle of the block if the traffic cop is not looking. Now, since prohibition has cut into the night business of the taxi game practically all of them are out during the day, making for greater congestion.

"(e) Prohibit cars from turning on Fifth Avenue, between Thirtieth and Fiftieth Streets. Also between Madison and Sixth Avenues from Thirtieth to Fiftieth Streets. Turning in traffic is one of the greatest evils making for congested traffic. Hundreds of cars will often be held up by one car attempting to turn. In side streets it is more difficult to turn, since it is practically always necessary to back up before making the complete turn. This procedure holds up the side street traffic, which in turn holds back the avenue traffic.

"(f) Prohibit left-hand turns between Thirtieth and Fiftieth Streets on Fifth Avenue. This is recognized as making for traffic congestion, since the Police Department has some streets designated where no left-hand turns are permitted. It has helped traffic at these points and would have far-reaching effects if carried out all along from Thirtieth to Fiftieth Street.

"(g) Prohibit all parking on the avenue. This could be accomplished by placing on each corner a carriage call signal to be connected with each store within each block, letting the chauffeurs park in the side street while owners are shopping. Few appreciate to what extent the parking privilege on Fifth Avenue is abused. I might give you an illustration: A week ago last Tuesday a woman kept her chauffeur out in front of the Edison Company's store for three hours while she was inside listening to the music. This is by no means an isolated case. I have any number of other similar cases.

"(h) With the doing of these things let Deputy Commissioner Harris put in his scheme of synchronizing the movement between Thirty-fourth and Fiftieth Streets."

Mr. Ritchie stated that checks of the avenue's traffic made recently between 6:30 A. M. and 7 P. M. showed that the preponderance of traffic was northward instead of southward. The buses alone, he wrote, daily bring northward to Thirty-third Street an average of 33,000 passengers, and many of them desired to shop along the avenue between Thirty-eighth and Forty-fifth Streets. He said that between 10 A. M. and 5 P. M. his buses picked up between Thirty-fourth and Fiftieth Streets approximately 21,000 passengers daily, all bound north. About 10,000 of this traffic was obtained between Thirty-eighth and Forty-fifth Streets, and under the new regulations the passengers would have to walk. He predicted a great traffic snarl when the regulations go into effect.

GERMAN City Bonds and Industrial Shares

The present market in German bonds and industrial shares is so exceptionally low that it affords a remarkable opportunity for exceedingly large profits.

We can quote the lowest possible price because of our direct connection with Berlin.

We sell for cash, outright purchase, or for equal payments over a definite period.

Correspondence invited in either German or English.

We have prepared a special report on conditions in Germany showing why we consider these securities a good purchase at present prices.

The Standard Safe 6% Investment of the Nation

THROUGHOUT the 38 years of its history the House of S. W. Straus & Co. has been a pioneer and leader in the development of a type of investment bonds which are unimpeachably conservative and fundamentally safe.

Today the type of investment bond which has been developed under the Straus Plan stands as the standard safe 6% investment of the nation. This merited place has been gained and has been held by these bonds because—

They are intrinsically safe;

They pay the attractive rate of 6%;

They have never known a failure of prompt payment in both interest and principal on the day due;

They offer complete freedom from care, responsibility and management;

They are not affected by market fluctuations or manipulation;

They are exceptionally free from the effects of labor troubles, economic changes and governmental regulation;

They afford opportunity for the widest diversification, as well as choice of maturity dates;

They are backed by the thorough-going service of a completely equipped, nation-wide organization.

These securities—sound first mortgage serial coupon bonds, netting 6% with 4% Federal Income Tax paid—will give you the same satisfaction and safety that they are giving today to more than 30,000 well-pleased customers throughout the country. Our booklet, Safety and 6%, will tell you why. Write for it today. Ask for—

Industrial Securities

THE investment markets of today are more largely made up of industrial stocks and bonds than ever before. Consequently a reference book or manual on industrial securities is in unusual demand.

IN view of this situation we again call public attention to the latest edition of

"Moody's Analyses of Industrials"

ONLY a few hundred copies of this edition are now available, and there will be no further reprints. It is the only annual on industrial securities now available and orders should be placed immediately to insure securing copies.

"THE SOUL OF ADVERTISING"

Tenth of a series of Messages on the preparedness of Albert Frank & Co. to meet the new advertising demands of Finance and Business.

THE importance of Good Copy can hardly be over-estimated. Most successful advertisers have learned that straining for effect, too strenuous salesmanship and over-clever phrase-making are responsible when copy fails to move the reader to action. As a result, the trained copy-writer is enjoying an ever increasing vogue. Such an expert knows exactly how best to reach and influence the class of readers desired. He is guided by the principles of unity, coherence and emphasis. He fashions his copy, keeping in mind such factors as clearness, brevity, and style correctness. He knows where to begin; what to leave unsaid; when to stop. Each copy writer on our Service Staff is so trained. Their ability is being proved daily. It is their business to make your advertising successful. Why not confer with them?

LIBRARIANS NAME CAMPAIGN CHIEFS

Ten Regional Directors Are Appointed at Meeting—Three Projects Outlined.

WILL FIGHT RADICALISM

Books for Blind and Extension of Rural Library Work Planned—Bishop Keator Speaks.

At a meeting of the American Library Association in the Park Avenue Hotel yesterday, ten librarians of national reputation were appointed Regional Directors of the Enlarged Program activities of the association, and three features of work proposed in a country-wide campaign were outlined. The features included a "Books for Everybody Campaign," designed to offset radical propaganda; rural library extension in the United States, and an extensive plan to obtain books for the civilian and soldier blind in this country. It was announced that as "a feeler" letters had been sent to leading authors asking them to pay the cost of printing one volume of their works in Braille for a circulating national blind library. About $5,000 was raised. Contributors included Dr. Henry van Dyke, Mary Roberts Rinehart, Alfred Noyes, Irving S. Cobb, Mary Raymond Shipman Andrews and Mrs. Jack London.

The meeting was called by Dr. Frank G. Hill, librarian of the Brooklyn Public Library. Bishop Frederick W. Keator, Bishop of the State of Washington and head of the Pacific Coast Executive Committee of the Board of Missions of the Protestant Episcopal Church, was the principal speaker. He appealed for adequate support for libraries. He said the libraries of the country have an income of $16,000,000, but that six or seven times that amount should be made available. Less than 27 per cent., or 794 of 2,944 counties in the United States, he asserted, have any library of 5,000 volumes, and that 2,170 counties are not equipped adequately to serve the people. He said thirty States serve less than 50 per cent. of their population, six serve less than 10 per cent. and one less than 2 per cent.

"The spirit of unrest that is sweeping the country indicates that foreign born who have come to this country have been neglected," said Bishop Keator. "One hundred per cent. American ideas are not being circulated. He told of widespread propaganda by radical elements and said Bolshevism and I. W. W.-ism are the same." Bishop Keator said he favored Herbert C. Hoover as the next President and expressed the opinion that the Pacific Northwest would support Hoover "no matter what ticket he is nominated on."

Charles F. Belden of Boston, New England States; Mary L. Titcom, Hagerstown, Md., Middle Atlantic States; Duncan Burnet, Atlanta, Ga., Southeastern States; Dr. T. M. Owen, Montgomery, Ala., Middle Southern States; Joseph L. Wheeler, Youngstown, Ohio, Central States; Clarence B. Lester, Madison, Wis., North Central States; Willis H. Kerr, Emporia, Kan., South Central States; Elizabeth H. West, Austin, Texas, Southwest States; Milton J. Ferguson, Sacramento, Cal., Middle Pacific, and John B. Kaiser, Tacoma, Wash., Northwest States.

ARE FILING RETURNS EARLY.

Income Taxpayers Improving on Last Year's Record.

Income tax returns are being filed earlier than usual. In the Second and Third Districts 348,315 returns were filed last year, and it was said yesterday at Collector Edwards's offices that this number probably would be greatly surpassed because of advances in salaries that have created more income taxpayers.

"Last year, because of delay in printing the tax forms," said Collector Edwards, "an extension of forty-five days after March 15 was given to taxpayers. This year there are plenty of forms, and there will be no general extension. Complete returns, accompanied by at least one-fourth of the tax, must be filed by March 15.

"The regulations provide, however, that in cases of sickness or absence Collectors may grant extensions of not exceeding thirty days. Application for such an extension must be made before the expiration of the period for which the extension is desired.

"If an accurate return can be not made before the end of the extension of thirty days granted by the Collector, an appeal for a further extension must be made to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with a full recital of the causes for the delay."

SPLENDID OPPORTUNITY FOR EARNEST HOMESEEKER.

My family, which was a large one, has reduced itself to my wife, myself and the servants. I have bought a smaller property in my immediate vicinity which meets my present requirements and desire to sell my large home. To do so quickly, I am offering it at a fraction of its real value to some one of culture and refinement who would be acceptable to my neighbors and myself. The grounds, which include an excellent tennis court, were beautifully landscaped by a prominent architect several years ago and elaborately planted with flowers and shrubs. Fine trees abound. The house is a gem, in absolutely perfect condition from cellar to attic. The purchaser could move in on 24 hours' notice and avoid the many annoyances and expense incident to occupying a new house. The first floor consists of a huge veranda facing east, a paneled living room 35 ft. long with immense inglenook fireplace, a spacious dining room, a tiled breakfast room, two butler's pantries and kitchen. Six master's bedrooms, one with open fireplace, and two very large tiled bathrooms comprise the second floor. The third floor has a pool and billiard room, extensive servants' quarters and servants' bath. The location is ideal, within five minutes' walk of the express station, with fine commuting service to New York City. The neighborhood is exclusively residential and occupied by an unusually fine class of people. Elevation over 900 feet. All city conveniences for comfortable living in the country prevail. I will sell for $20,500 complete, $10,000 of which can remain on first mortgage, and easy terms can be arranged for the balance. Complete details, including plans and several pictures, can be obtained from the writer by addressing Suburban Home Owner, P. O. Box 529, City Hall Station, New York City.

$1,000,000 BUILDING FOR BRIDGE PLAZA

The Garford Motor Truck Company Buys Block Front in Long Island City.

WILL IMPROVE AT ONCE

Twelve-Story Structure Covering Entire Site to be Completed Next Fall.

As a site for the largest building in the Queens Borough Bridge Plaza section of Long Island City, a holding company representing the Garford Motor Truck Company, has purchased the entire block front between Crescent and William Streets.

The property, which has a frontage of 200 feet on the south side of the Plaza and a depth of 170 feet, will be improved at once with a twelve-story structure of artistic design.

William D. Bloodgood, inc., negotiated the sale of the property for a client, and it is estimated, according to a member of the brokerage firm that the development will involve an expenditure of about $1,000,000.

Tentative plans call for a twelve-story structure providing about 25,000 square feet on each floor, and it is understood that the Garford Motor Truck Company will establish its eastern executive, sales and service headquarters in the structure when the building is completed next Fall.

An official of the company said yesterday that the Garford interests chose this location because of its accessibility to the business centre of Manhattan, being just across Fifty-ninth Street, and by the exceptional transportation facilities and the growing importance of the Bridge Plaza district of Long Island City.

The fact is emphasized by reason of the new B. R. T. tunnel, now about completed, and when put in service some time in February this year, will run directly from the Bridge Plaza to the centre of Manhattan in about ten minutes.

In addition to the new subway, the Interborough Subway, Second Avenue Elevated and the surface line cars supplement and amplify these transportation facilities between the Bridge Plaza district and the business centre of Manhattan. Carefully tabulated data show that more than 14,000 vehicles pass this point daily.

HELP WANTED—Male.

IF YOU ARE A REAL $25,000 SALESMAN, BUT ARE NOW MAKING LESS, YOU CAN MAKE $25,000 OR MORE YEARLY WITH US.

If you are an ordinary salesman, don't bother to answer this advertisement. We have enough ordinary men.

There are big salesmen who would be big executives in banks, railroads or industrial concerns except that they prefer to be salesmen. That is the kind of man we want.

Our product is very saleable. An ordinary salesman can make $6,000 to $7,000 yearly with us, but we have enough of that type.

We want the kind of man who is just constitutionally unable to rest easy, to associate with his own sense of failure when a prospect who should buy says "No."

We have big business waiting for that man to close.

If he makes good and wants such an opening, we will presently place him in charge of an entire State or group of States, with as many salesmen under him as he can manage. He can have a general agent's commission—and it is entirely possible for him to make $50,000 or more if he can make men produce what the value of the territory deserves.

Our man will have to sell a service which informs business men months ahead of coming changes in business conditions, which changes, if unforeseen, may lose these business men scores of thousands, or hundreds of thousands of dollars, while, if foreseen and planned for, may enable an equal or greater amount of profit.

Our service is easy for a big salesman to sell. We have one big salesman who has made the big sales we describe. Our service is very hard for an ordinary man to sell. Our records show this.

If you are a real big, broad-minded, business trained salesman, who never stops studying until he finds the way, and you are not looking for a drawing account, this job is made for you. You will have every backing and selling aid which modern efficiency can devise.

But please do not bother us unless you have a proven record. If you have, "Welcome" is on the door mat.

Write us very briefly about one sale's success you have made. T 323 Times.

SAYS NEWBERRY MAN USED COURT THREAT

Must Support Senator to Win Appeal, Convicted Man Says He Was Told.

HE DID SO AND GOT VERDICT

Ex-Mayor McKeighan of Flint Accuses Fletcher, State Labor Commissioner, of Dictating Terms.

Special to The New York Times.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Feb. 12.—The prosecution at today's session of the Newberry trial caused a flurry in the ranks of the defense with the testimony of former Mayor William H. McKeighan of Flint, who told of an alleged threat made by Newberry workers. He testified that two years ago he was arrested on a complaint charging assault and robbery while armed. The case was a feature of the Flint courts for more than a year. He was convicted and his appeal was pending in the Michigan Supreme Court during the Summer of 1918, when the Newberry forces were fighting for success at the primaries. They were afraid they would not carry Flint. McKeighan said his support was sought, but that he was in favor of Osborn.

"I was in my drug store, alone," said the witness. "Deputy Labor Inspector Fred Henry of Flint came into see me. He said there was a party of men outside who wanted to talk to me. I told him to have them come in. Among them were Richard Fletcher, State Labor Commissioner Paul H. King, Newberry Campaign Manager and Fred Castator of Detroit. King said he was making his last round of the State before the primaries and that, while they had found some rough spots, all the difficulty had been ironed out, except the trouble in Flint. He wanted my support. King said, 'You are one of the rough spots.' He asked what I wanted. I said, 'I do not want anything. I am not for Newberry.'

"Fletcher said, 'I told you this man would not take money.' He said whether or not Newberry was elected Senator, Newberry men would still be in charge of the State, and that they would see to the appeal of my case in the Supreme Court. If I was for Newberry my case would be reversed, if not it would be affirmed.

"While I doubted Fletcher's word, politics is funny, and I did not want to take any chances. While the Newberry men were talking to me Hugh Maddigan, a man named Livingston and a man named Delmore came in. I told these men, who were my supporters, that we had better not take any chances, and that we should turn from Osborn and support Newberry. I got out my workers and we carried Flint."

"What happened to your case"? he was asked.

"It was reversed," said McKeighan.

Martin Littleton cross-examined McKeighan for twenty minutes, and then asked leave to continue the examination at the opening of court on Friday.

McKeighan said he had been arrested before for the illegal sale of liquor. For years, he said, he was a power in Flint politics, was elected Alderman and Mayor in 1914 and 1915. Mr. Dailey issued a statement, saying that McKeighan was not attacking the integrity of the Supreme Court, but that he did attack the good faith and integrity of Fletcher, who made the threat.

Testimony showing the activities of the State Bolo Club, an organization of Spanish-American War veterans, organized in June, 1918, in Michigan, as a branch of the national organization, in behalf of Newberry was given by Oscar E. Kilstrom, Grand Rapids, President of the club, and also by Grand Juror Jordan of Ionia, who repeated the Grand Jury testimony of William E. Rice, Grand Rapids, a defendant.

Kilstrom said that William J. Mickel, an alleged Democrat and also a defendant, helped organize the club at the annual reunion of the Spanish-American War veterans at Saginaw and that he also helped get a resolution through the organization at the meeting indorsing Newberry. Mickel was supposed to be working for the nomination of James W. Helme, a Democrat, to defeat Henry Ford. Letters carrying the Bolo Club indorsement were sent to 10,000 members. Charles A. Floyd, a Newberry manager, paid some of the expenses.

The Grand Jury testimony showed that Rice, who was Secretary of the club, made a frank and full statement about his part in the campaign. He said he traveled over the State canvassing support for Newberry among war veterans, and that he received $125 salary and $120 expenses (in addition to $800 for printing. No report was made of these expenditures.

Helme said he supposed he was to get the Bolo Club support until he heard Kilstrom's testimony.

Harrison B. Merrill, a Kalamazoo newspaper man, told of being engaged by the Newberry committee to write advertising for $25 a week. He received his pay regularly but did not write advertising. He was asked to get petitions and to circulate literature.

Merrill at the opening of the trial three weeks ago changed his plea from standing mute to that of nolo contendre. Judge Sessions accepted that plea. He is the second respondent to take the stand against his co-defendants.

William Bailey of Detroit, head of the musicians' federation, testified that Fred Castator tried to engage him at $40 a week to work among laboring men for Newberry, but that he refused. Castator finally induced him to go to King, but Bailey again refused to take part. Later he said he got a letter from Newberry himself, dated New York, asking that he take hold of the campaign on the ground that Newberry was in the service and could not speak for himself, but that he depended upon the patriotic ones at home to stand by him.

This letter, the prosecution claims, is a blow to the Newberry claim that the Senator did not know what kind of a campaign his committee was waging.

FOUR PAPERS SUSPEND AS WORKERS LEAVE

New Haven Journals Give Up Publication Temporarily Because of Lack of Employes.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 12.—New Haven will be wiohtu a daily newspaper tomorrow for the first time in a century and a half. The Register, Times-Leader, and Union, evening papers, suspended publication today, and The Journal-Courier will follow suit tomorrow morning because of a wage dispute with their composing room employes who have been gradually leaving their employ the last few days, asserting that they can obtain higher wages in other cities.

Last Summer the compositors signed a wage agreement to work for $30 a week till May 1, when they would receive $33 a week. Instead of striking they resigned their positions individually. This morning only about twenty of forty composing room employes were at work, and it is alleged that an agitator induced the others to quit.

The publishers this morning offered a $4 a week increase, putting into effect now the amount guaranteed for next May, but the machine operators insisted on taking traveling cards and leaving the city. The newspaper publishers insist that this is a violation of their contract.

The following notice was printed today on the first page of the evening newspapers and displayed in public places:

"Notice to our readers:

"Owing to the violation by the Typographical Union of their contract with the newspapers and refusal to work on all the papers as ordered by their international officers, the four New Haven newspapers announce their temporary suspension today. An appeal has been made to the International Typographical Union and a conference is expected tomorrow which it is believed will lead to the settlement of the walkout.

The Yale Daily News, which suspended pubneation four days the first of the week to allow its editorial board to attend the junior promenade festivities, will be the only daily published in the city tomorrow, but the evening newspapers hope for an adjustment tomorrow.

An Apology

We admit it—Yesterday, our service to Customers was certainly below par.

Not for lack of trying on our part, however. We tried—and kept on trying all the way to closing time.

On several occasions we even closed the doors, so the holiday wave of shoppers would not demoralize us altogether—as it threatened to.

We have no excuse except that low $32.50 price to clear several thousand fine Hart Schaffner & Marx Suits and Overcoats. Apparently all New York was interested.

Old customers, will understand the situation, and cheerfully make due allowances. New customers, we trust, will accept our apologies with the fine clothing values they found here, as reason to visit us again—and soon.

The Attraction of Light

is as instinctively compelling to the human being as is the flame to the moth. The eye unconsciously travels to light.

That the modern and progressive merchant thoroughly realizes this is evidenced in his Electric Sign displays. He relies upon the Electric Sign to identify his location, to attract the multitude to its brilliant centre and to advertise his wares.

Electric Signs are the lowest priced advertising media known. They create a continuity of impressions—today, tomorrow, every day—to the thousands whose eyes are attracted by the power of light.

Our partial payment plan makes Electric Signs easy to buy. An inquiry from you will bring full information.
